

Forgotten Name

Dominion Takes A Holiday

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — By law today is Dominion Day. But by federal news release it's July 1.

Releases from the state secretary's department call it July 1 or "Canada's birthday."

Nowhere in the news releases issued here is there a reference to Dominion Day.

Perhaps it's a gentle preparation for another official move to change the name to Canada Day.

WITHIN YEAR?

An informed source said Monday a bill to amend the Dominion Day Act of 1879 to make it the Canada Day Act may be presented within the next year.

A bill to change the name to Canada Day was passed by Commons and Senate in 1946. But a minor Senate amendment held it up and it died on the order paper.

Renewed efforts to change the name were made during the Pearson Liberal administration. Jean Chretien, now Indian affairs Minister, Yves Forest (L—Stanstead) and Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) all sponsored private Canada Day bills.

DIFFENBAKER PIQUED

Former prime minister Lester Pearson avoided Dominion Day. When he referred to it as Confederation Day in 1967, he was quickly challenged by John Diefenbaker, then the Conservative leader.

"Does this mean more chisel-

Tolerance

Canada's Great Asset

OTTAWA (CP) — The tolerance that Canadians show towards each other is the greatest natural resource of the country. Prime Minister Trudeau says in a Dominion Day message.

Text of the message, released by his office Monday, said: "Canada in 1969 is as exciting a country as it was on the centennial of Confederation, as promising and rewarding a country as the millions of persons who have come here to settle over the decades believed it to be, as rich and beautiful and expansive a country as the Fathers of Confederation a century ago dreamed it might become."

MORE VALUABLE

"We are a fortunate people, we Canadians who live in this land. And our greatest good fortune, that which is becoming increasingly evident to others even if not always to ourselves, is not measured in terms of economic or political or military strength."

"It is more valuable than the sum of all of these. It is the greatest of our natural resources. It is the tolerance towards one another which forms such a basic part of the character of Canadians."

"Tolerance and moderation are found in this country perhaps in larger measure than anywhere else; against them we can judge our stature as a country and as a people. Our institutions of government and our ju-

CAERNARVON (CP) — Three men were reported killed in two separate bomb blasts in a small nearby town early today only hours before Prince Charles was to be invested as Prince of Wales here.

In another incident, a bomb hoax stopped the Royal Train carrying Charles from London to the scene of his investiture.

Man's Body Found

In the first explosion, the mutilated body of a man in his early 20s was found behind the Bee Hotel in Abergele, 46 miles northeast of here.

In the second incident in Abergele, police said two men died in an attempt to blow up a local government office there. Public buildings have long been prime targets of extremists seeking independence for Wales.

The men were not immediately identified, but one was believed to be in his early 20s.

A police spokesman said: "The men were carrying explosives when they blew up. Their bodies were found behind the local government offices. One can assume they had gone there to blow them up."

First reports said one man had died but then a second body was found.

Meanwhile the royal train carrying Charles, the Queen and most of the Royal Family was halted for 50 minutes while police checked what appeared to be a bomb found under a railway bridge farther ahead on the train route.

After it was discovered to be a dummy, the train moved on to a secret location in northwest Wales. The Royal Family spent the night there under heavy armed guard.

Police said the dummy bomb at Chester, about 70 miles from here, was made of plastic sticks tied to a timing device.

Signal wires and telephone cables were cut on a stretch of the route between Aber and Bangor but an emergency crew quickly repaired the damage.

Soldiers Stick Pumper For Stack of Stamps

ARDLEIGH, England (CP) — A convoy of army trucks rumbled into Peter Lewis's filling station for 2,000 gallons of gas and then asked for the trading stamps. The soldiers got 10,000 which they intended to exchange for something for their mess.

B.C. Workers in Alaska

Six Missing In Car Dive

HYDER, Alaska (CP) — Six men are believed to have drowned in a car plunge off a dock into 600 feet of water here.

Four of the men were identified as construction workers employed on the Stewart-Watson Lake highway project in northern B.C.

They were identified as Harry S. Watson, 40, of Penticton; Reginald C. Wist, 21, of Westlock, Alta.; J. Sanford Main, 28, of Surrey, B.C.; and Reginald J. Jeffries, 40, of Prince George. The four were employed by Peter Klewitt and Sons Construction Ltd.

The other two men were identified as Rob Roy Edriza, 25, of Good Hope Lake, B.C., and George Joseph (Blackie) Parison, 35, of Stewart.

RCMP in Stewart, B.C., which adjoins Hyder, Alaska, said there were no witnesses to the mishap which apparently occurred early Sunday.

Three of the men had earlier chartered an aircraft to fly them to Ketchikan. The aircraft arrived at 6 a.m. but found no passengers waiting.

"We can only presume they've gone over the rail and into the water," an RCMP spokesman said.

He said a check of the dock showed skid marks 70 feet long and a broken guard rail.

State of Siege In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — President Juan Carlos Onganía imposed a state of siege Monday night in Argentina, where Gov. Nelson Rockefeller is on an official visit, to combat a "subversive plan" connected with the murder of the nation's most powerful labor leader.

The state of siege, imposed nine hours before Rockefeller's departure, gives the military regime the right to suspend all constitutional guarantees of individual liberties, including freedom of the press. No specific measures were mentioned, however.

Monday morning, terrorists shot to death Augusto Timoteo Vandor, head of the moderate faction of the General Labor Confederation, which has not joined in generalized labor protests against the Rockefeller visit.

Vandor

nothing to connect the slaying to Rockefeller's presence as a presidential envoy. But police arrested the leader of the labor militants and Vandor's severest critic, Raimundo Ongaro, and later took 50 of Ongaro's followers into custody.

Interior Minister Francisco Imaz announced the state of siege imposition in a nationwide radio and television address Monday night, telling citizens there was "a perfectly organized subversive plot" in the country.

"Order and national security is in danger," Imaz said. He did not connect the threat to the New York governor's visit. Argentina has gone through several weeks of strike fomented by leftist students and workers in general protest against the military regime of Onganía as well as against Rockefeller's visit.

Vandor, 42, was slain in a submachinegun attack. Police said Ongaro had been arrested "for his own personal security," and he was not charged with complicity.

I AM NOT a member of any union, have never been a member of any union and quite honestly, like it that way. It's a personal thing, not any great antipathy to the union movement. I've been in the newspaper business for nearly a quarter of a century, think it's the most enjoyable way I know to earn the daily bread, but feel much improvement could be effected in my trade.

I am the first to realize unions have been the life blood of the working man in many businesses and industries. Without them the worker would be bled dry and trampled. But I refuse to concede the union movement is the only way.

HERE at my place of business there are four major unions — the Guild, which takes in reporters, business office personnel, circulation and janitorial staff — the pressmen's union, the printers union and the stereotypers union.

There is no argument with the fact these unions, all with United States headquarters, have done yeoman service in getting salaries and benefits up to a reasonable standard. But there are also certain evils that go with the good that has been won.

IN TOO MANY instances, for example, incompetent members of the Guild are protected beyond reason, whereas the fully competent members get no greater benefits. There are members in every guild who, through being able to stay reasonably inconspicuous, being able to stay out of any serious trouble, have become senior reporters of five years' standing. And they'll stay in that category until doomsday. The crack-jack reporter, who can be counted on to handle any assignment with speed and ability, gets the same pay. Initiative, therefore, takes a back seat.

Certain aspects of union solidarity are also a little suspect. For instance, if a paper in New York goes on strike, Guild members in Victoria get ticked so much out of their pay envelopes to help with strike pay. Seems incongruous that members on a little paper in Victoria, Canada, should be divvying up for members of big papers in New York.

York. Many guild members have complained about this.

But there are reasons why unions have been necessary. Management was slow in the past to effect necessary working condition changes and salary improvements. Management, in other words, brought it on themselves many years ago.

THE ALTERNATIVE to unions is profit-sharing. Profit-sharing plans are becoming increasingly popular in many areas in many different industries, including the newspaper industry.

It doesn't take any full-fledged genius to realize both management and personnel benefit by profit-sharing. The better the product, the greater the productivity, the greater the profit — hence, a bigger slice of the melon for the employees.

Also, I think, a better relationship between boss and worker. A sort of spirit, a bond, to turn out a better product. That spirit, or bond, does not exist under our union system.

BARBAGALING sessions can be long and extremely costly. Profit-sharing eliminates the necessity of such sessions and therefore, extra dough in both pockets.

Let's be honest about it. Management has little regard for the unions — they're thorns in their sides. And be honest in the other evaluation as well — union members really couldn't care less about management. Management isn't going to give up one penny that isn't necessary. Bonuses aren't even considered. Union dues what is contracted for and not another thing more. In other words, both sides are saying, "I've got mine. Jack to hell with you."

YOU SAY profit-sharing can't work without aid of unionization? Check it out in those companies that have such incentives and see if I'm not right. All I know is the present union-management system has too many flaws to be rated the best possible system.

The spirit of co-operation is just as necessary in my business as it is on the Green-Bay Packers. I hope I'm still in the dodge when management and employee can get around to sharing the rewards of their joint efforts.

Jitters, Color Mix on Investiture Eve

Red Dragon Even on Milk Bottles

CAERNARVON, Wales (CP) — Golden trumpets blared from the ramparts of medieval Caernarvon castle on Monday as preparations were completed for Britain's greatest royal ceremony since the Queen's coronation in 1953.

Below as aristocrats and commoners mixed in carnival atmosphere, a massive security force worked to prevent any hostile acts against Prince Charles, heir to the throne who will be invested as Prince of Wales today.

It was a strange and jovial scene as the royal trumpeters practiced fanfares atop of the 75-foot castle walls.

The ancient town is gaily bedecked with banners of the Welsh national emblem, the red dragon, and with Charles' own coat of arms with three feathers.

The red dragon is everywhere, even on top of milk bottles.

But men in white crash helmets carrying fire extinguishers made bomb checks throughout the day, driving in a red-fendered truck marked "explosive disposal."

An army of 2,500 police brought here for the investiture had reason for jitters. In Cardiff, the Welsh capital, 150 miles away, a time bomb blew a three-foot hole in a post office wall Monday morning. No one was hurt.

Hundreds of police held crowds behind barriers in Caernarvon Square beside the 700-year-old castle where Charles will kneel before the Queen to become English prince of this mountainland of 2,500,000 Welsh.

Television Satellite Goes Awry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Communications Satellite Corp. Monday reported troubles with one of two communications satellites operating over the Atlantic. It said it had taken emergency steps to try to keep telephone and television traffic flowing, including that which will carry today's investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales.

The organization said it has reactivated the historic pioneering communications satellite Earl Bird, which was retired in January but was kept as a spare in orbit.

The corporation also disclosed plans for instituting an elaborate emergency relay system, employing other satellites, to ensure televising of the investiture to North America will go ahead as planned.

Persons arriving for final rehearsals were searched. Lunch boxes and camera cases were opened. About 250 musicians and singers had to open their cases and spread out the contents for inspection.

Six army bomb squads swept mine detectors through the castle, from the new-laid lawns around the royal thrones to the "murder halls" above the gates where defenders once poured boiling oil on Welsh rebels fighting English rule.

The feeling for independence and nationalism has never died in Wales. But surveys have shown that while most Welshmen agree with the calls for home rule of the nationalists, they also support the investiture.

Police fear that only a few extremists — those not already behind bars on various charges — might disrupt the investiture to show their opposition to an English prince.

In the words of George Thomas, secretary of state for Wales, "you cannot guard against lunatics."

But most people here could joke about the supposed threat. At the vaulted stone gate of the castle, as members of the Welsh Symphony Orchestra were searched, bystanders quipped: "I say, old chap, why is your cello ticking like that?"

For the thousands of tourists Monday was a day to see the sights and enrich Caernarvonians by buying souvenirs ranging from large investiture carpets to small pen-and-ink portraits of the prince.

Eleven years of planning have gone into today's ceremonies. Charles has spent months preparing — going through interviews, rehearsals and tours of his principality.

And he has done something that few if any of the 20 previous Princes of Wales bothered to do. He has learned Welsh.

Rhythm Method Falls Down

By G. T. THORSTON, MD

Dear Dr. Thornton: Would you please explain the rhythm method for birth control? I'm sure this has appeared in your column before, but would like it repeated as I am getting married soon. — L.G.

This is a question which, frankly, I don't much like to write about. Why? Because at best it still is not as reliable a method as others.

As a physician, I recommend other methods of birth control. For those who, for religious reasons, consider that abstinence is the only acceptable method (and the rhythm method is periodic abstinence) I can explain the physiology. But I decline to accept responsibility in case the method, for any reason, fails. Thus I would prefer that such folks obtain pamphlets or whatever through their churches, leaving the responsibility there rather than with me.

However, since the basis of the rhythm method can be a help to those who do want children as well as to those who do not, here is an outline.

A woman ovulates — an ovum, or egg is released from the ovary — at about mid-cycle. For a couple of days, as the ovum moves down the Fallopian tube to the uterus, if it meets and unites with a male sperm cell, conception can occur.

There is no way to say accurately how long an ovum or sperm cell can remain viable — that is, active and capable of causing conception. About two days, a bit more or less, is the prevailing opinion, although some authorities think it may be longer.

It is because of this period of viability that a sperm cell, entering the female genital region a little before ovulation occurs, can still cause pregnancy when the ovum does appear.

The rhythm method, in plain terms, amounts to avoiding sexual activity for several days before and during the time the ovum is present and viable. Theoretically, if you accept the two-day viability of both ovum and sperm, four days of abstinence is enough.

But if some longer viability exists, the time of abstinence must be extended. Some authorities say situations can occur permitting conception even outside that span.

All that aside, the question still remains: how do you know that fertile period occurs? Those who want children will try to achieve conception during that fertile period. Those who want to avoid conception will avoid sexual union during that period.

I see that I don't have room today to go into the question of how to determine (or try to determine) when the fertile interval will occur, but I'll discuss that in Thursday's column.

diary have long encouraged a climate of non-interference of Canadians towards Canadians. We are all the richer for it.

"We here take for granted what many others seek and envy: Relations that by and large accept without question differences in color or origin or language, and a common resolution to eliminate whatever intolerance does exist."

"This, surely, is the strength of Canada. This is the heritage of Canadians. To enjoy the opportunity to live in dignity as individuals, to share freedom of thought and expression and movement, to seek happiness each in our own way. This spirit we all share, from this spirit we all benefit."

"On this July 1st, let us be thankful of our good fortune as Canadians; let us resolve in the forthcoming year to contribute to the climate which makes this such a blessed land; let us not ignore our many problems, but let us approach them aware of our traditions and our strengths."

Huge Ransom Nullified With Death

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Congo premier Moïse Tshombe was on the verge of being ransomed from the Algerians for $10,000,000 when he died, a close friend and international arms dealer said Monday.

Col. Hubert Julian, 72, said he was to have flown to Montreal Monday to meet a contract and hand over the ransom payment. "I had been working on this for two years," Julian said.

Or Broken Heart?

Coronary To Blame

ALGIERS (AP) — An autopsy on former Congo Premier Moïse Tshombe showed he died of a heart ailment early Sunday in Algerian captivity, a government communiqué said Monday. But a diplomat who knew him well surmised he died of loneliness and a broken heart.

The autopsy was performed at Maillot military hospital in Algiers by Prof. Claude Olivier of France, head of the department of pathology of Marseille University, who flew to Algeria for the purpose.

END TO RUMORS
The autopsy report, signed by 11 doctors, apparently put an end to rumors that Tshombe, depressed by two years of seemingly limitless imprisonment, had committed suicide.

The flamboyant Congolese leader was kidnapped by a plane hijacker exactly two years ago and imprisoned on arrival at Boufarik Air Force Base 15 miles south of Algiers. One high-ranking Western diplomat who knew Tshombe intimately in Elisabethville—now Lumumbashi—agreed.

COMPANY-LOVER
"Tshombe was a gregarious man. He was active and dynamic and he loved company. His exile in Spain must have been enough for him, but his lonely imprisonment probably was unbearable. It may not be medical certifiable, but I would not be surprised if he simply died of a broken heart."

The circumstances of Tshombe's kidnapping have never been fully clarified by the Algerian authorities. His plane was hijacked on a flight between Ibiza and Mallorca in the Spanish Balearic islands and forced to fly to Algiers.

Reds Resent Nixon Trip To Romania

MOSCOW (UPI) — Informed sources said Monday the signing of a Soviet-Romanian friendship treaty may be delayed because of Russian resentment over President Nixon's forthcoming visit to Bucharest.

The 20-year pact, an extension of an accord signed in 1949 which expired in February, 1969, was initiated last summer but awaited the visit to Bucharest by Soviet party secretary Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The Soviet leaders had been planning to visit Romania for that purpose sometime in July, the sources said. But in view of the announcement of Nixon's visit, they are likely to postpone or even cancel the trip, they added.

Diplomatic sources in Bucharest said Brezhnev and Kosygin are expected to arrive several days before Nixon and sign the treaty.

"Tshombe was like my son. Sometimes he called me father. He did not die a natural death. He was very lonely."

Julian said he had first offered the Algerians $2,000,000 to release Tshombe, who was kidnapped in 1967 when Frenchman hijacked his plane and forced it to land in Algiers.

"The Algerians asked for $4,000,000 but when I raised that, they demanded $6,000,000 and when I got that, they demanded $10,000,000," Julian said.

BY BORROWING
He said he had raised the money by borrowing from an American insurance firm and a firm in England.

"He (Tshombe) was going to pay it back when he got out," Julian said. "He was a rich man. He had millions in Swiss banks, but of course he couldn't get it until he got out."

Julian, a wealthy arms merchant known as the Black Eagle of Harlem, was expelled from the Congo in 1962 while he was in Tshombe's mineral-rich home province of Katanga.

Takeover

Nigerian Aid Doubted

LAGOS (AP) — International relief officials, shaken by an announcement that the Nigerian federal government is taking over all civil war relief efforts for both federally-controlled areas and Biafra, questioned Monday whether the government could cope with the gigantic program.

The officials, representing about 20 private agencies including the International Committee of the Red Cross, met after the federal commissioner for information and labor, Chief Anthony Enahoro, told them their efforts are no longer needed.

In effect, the move meant an almost complete blockade of beleaguered Biafra, the secessionist state reduced by the civil war to about 3,000 square miles holding 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 persons.

BIAFRA SILENT
There was no immediate comment from Biafra which recently said it would not accept any relief supplies brought in by way of federal ports or airfields.

Enahoro said aid to Biafra would continue, but only after prior approval and inspection by federal officials. Supplies, he added, would be restricted to basic essentials and may not include fuel or spare parts.

He gave no indication how the program would be carried out. In announcing the new policy, Enahoro also said the International Committee of the Red Cross is no longer authorized to accept donations on behalf of Nigeria.

Defenders Prepare For New Assaults

SAIGON (AP) — The embattled defenders of Ben Het in northeastern South Vietnam emerged from their underground bunkers Monday and began patching up their battered outpost for a possible new North Vietnamese attack.

The two-month-long artillery siege of the small United States Special Forces camp near the Cambodian border was lifted during the weekend. Officers expressed belief the North Vietnamese force, estimated at up to 3,000 infantry plus an artillery regiment, had moved back.

Ben Het, 280 miles northeast of Saigon, is defended by about 70 South Vietnamese civilian irregulars and Montagnard tribesmen, a 12-man team of U.S. Special Forces advisers and about 800 American artillerymen.

About 200 wives and children of the irregulars also are in the camp. They went underground when the siege began in May and remained as it gathered during the last two weeks.

The sources said the pistol duel erupted shortly before midnight Monday night when a joint U.S. South Vietnamese military police patrol was called to the Ivory Tower bar near Saigon's central market to investigate a complaint of a disturbance.

The two American MPs were killed when they attempted to arrest a group of men drinking in the bar.

Guerrilla Positions Pounded

Israeli Jets Reply to Blast

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel jet strafed and bombed guerrilla positions inside Jordan south of the Sea of Galilee on Monday following an early-morning sabotage blast in Tel Aviv that injured 10 persons.

In Jerusalem, Premier Golda Meir warned that those who attack Israel "should not be surprised if they are hit sevenfold in response."

"Anyone who fails to honor the ceasefire agreement and shoots at us, cannot claim immunity from the results of his aggression," she told the Knesset parliament.

STOLEN JEEP
More than 100 pounds of explosives packed into a stolen jeep detonated with a roar close to Tel Aviv's Dizengoff, the main street. Defence Minister Moshe Dayan visited the area and spoke to the injured in hospital while staying up late to hear news of Israel's deepest commando raid into Egypt since the 1967 war.

The Israeli army announced the commandos destroyed a 500-kilowatt high-tension power line linking Cairo to the Aswan Dam on Sunday night. The attack, the closest to Cairo yet reported, was made on Suhai, west of the Nile and 130 miles south of the Egyptian capital. The Israelis said all their troops returned safely.

EGYPTIAN DENIAL
In Cairo, the Egyptian government denied any such raid had taken place. An Egyptian spokesman said electric power was not out in Cairo during the night.

Mrs. Meir said Israel had rejected an increase in Arab attacks while four-power talks in the Middle East are being held. "The Soviets today are closer to Nasser (President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt) than they were before the Big Four talks began," she said.

At the United Nations, Jordan demanded Monday that the Security Council condemn Israel and threaten it with an arms boycott for actions in Old Jerusalem.

Israel replied that Jordan was not entitled to speak even for the Arab minority in the Old City and was seeking only to spurn peace with Israel and continue a policy of aggressive warfare.

Ambassador Muhammad H. El-Farra of Jordan, addressing an urgent meeting of the 15-member council called at his request, accused Israel of looting and wanton destruction in the Old City, won by Israel in the June war of 1967. He said the Israelis are desecrating holy places and disregarding the rights of its Arab and Christian population.

El-Farra asked that the council condemn Israel for not complying with a resolution approved on May 21 of last year calling on Israel not to alter Jerusalem's status.

Two Killed In Saigon Bar Fight

SAIGON (Reuters) — A South Vietnamese paratroop colonel was arrested today following a gun battle in a Saigon bar in which two United States Military police were killed, police sources said.

A U.S. military spokesman confirmed that the MPs were killed in the fray, but their names were not immediately available.

The sources said the pistol duel erupted shortly before midnight Monday night when a joint U.S. South Vietnamese military police patrol was called to the Ivory Tower bar near Saigon's central market to investigate a complaint of a disturbance.

The two American MPs were killed when they attempted to arrest a group of men drinking in the bar.

Renewed Riots Hit Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR (Special) — Racial tension broke out in renewed clashes between Malays and Chinese in this capital during the weekend, leaving at least five persons dead, but heavily armed police and troops appeared Monday night to have restored order.

More than six weeks after bloody Malay-Chinese rioting led to the creation of a Malay-led authoritarian regime in Malaysia, fighting started Saturday night at almost the same place in downtown Kuala Lumpur controlled its rioting this time.

Clashes spread to three more areas from the Chowkit district. In addition to the five persons officially reported dead, and undetermined number were injured, and at least 20 houses were set on fire. At one point police fired in the air to break up a gang fight.

The official death toll in May's rioting was 185. Police and army patrols and roadblocks appeared to have controlled the rioting this time.

A Proud Day

ONE HUNDRED AND TWO years ago today Canada was proclaimed a nation. In the intervening years it has grown in strength, stature and reputation through the industry, courage and wisdom of its native and adopted sons and daughters, to attain heights undreamed of by its founders.

For Canada to have achieved the success it has was no small feat. The accomplishment of unity itself was one which no other country of such size and of such diversity of people has duplicated without bloodshed or violent upheaval.

This is not to say that Canada's road to the future has always been a smooth one. Far from it: the way has often been rough and unsteady, hard times have often been its lot and sacrifices frequently have been demanded of and made by its people.

Yet, by and large, a good many Canadians would still go along to a certain degree with the words of Nicholas Flood Davin—with some updating—who wrote this about Canada and Canadians in 1891:

"We are a happy people. We are a contented people. We are a prosperous people. We are a loyal people. If there is anything old-fashioned in being loyal, we are content to be old-fashioned. We have a country whose extent and riches it would not be easy to surpass. . . . We have the best form of government in the world, at once the freest, the most democratic, and the most conservative. We have no universal suffrage; we have no aristocracy; we have no agitators because we have no grievances. . . ."

However, though much of what Mr. Davin said 78 years ago remains true, much of it is invalid today. Today we may have our doubts about how good our government is today we do have universal suffrage and many believe we have developed our own type of aristocracy, and today we certainly have our agitators because we have our grievances.

Among the grievances—though perhaps not a serious one—has been our apparent inability to establish a Canadian identity.

Northrop Frye in his "Literary History of Canada" touches on this dilemma in this way: "It is not much wonder if Canada developed with the bewilderment of a neglected child preoccupied with trying to define its own identity, alternately humiliated and diffident about its own achievements. Adolescent dreams of glory haunt the Canadian consciousness (and unconsciousness), some naive and some sophisticated. In the naive area are the predictions that the twentieth century belongs to Canada, that our cities will become much bigger than they ought to be, or like Edmonton and Vancouver, 'gateways' to somewhere else. . . ."

The more sophisticated usually take the form of a Messianic complex about Canadian culture. For Canadian culture, no less than Alberta, has always been 'next year country.' The myth of the hero brought up in the forest retreat, awaiting for the moment his giant strength will be fully grown and he can emerge into the world, informs a good deal of Canadian criticism down to our own time."

With this Mr. Frye attempts to tell us—as Mr. Davin did before him—that Canada is and what Canadians are. Most Canadians will likely find it difficult to wholly agree or wholly disagree with either of their views.

However, whether we are the simple uncomplicated people Mr. Davin says we are or the complex mixture Mr. Frye sees us, we have managed to make Canada what it is today—and we may take a great deal of pride in the job we and our predecessors have done.

Lessons from Defeat

SEVERAL FACTORS may have been at work in the S defeat at the polls of Victoria's proposed five-year, $8,588,000 capital expenditure program. The rejection was resounding, and if the city council is to hope for success in another vote next year, it must take account of all the probable causes.

In hindsight, the timing of the referendum was undoubtedly one of the reasons for the 60-per cent adverse vote. The observation of the city manager was that the young people of Victoria were notably absent from the polling stations. These citizens might be expected to be the most enthusiastic about civic improvement and the least oppressed by rising taxes. But just after school gets out is hardly the time when young families are thinking about such things.

The fact that increased assessments raised taxes sharply for many property owners this year also may have been of some negative effect, the more so again for the timing. This is the tax-paying time of year.

Further there will have been a quite widespread resistance to the city borrowing at a time when interest rates are so high, and when all governments are being implored to combat the inflationary trend. (It is to be recalled, though, that Premier W. A. C. Bennett cut back on school construction only to encounter still higher interest rates and building costs later.)

Somewhat paradoxically, however, one of the biggest factors in the defeat of the bylaw may have been Victoria's smooth and quiet civic administration. Had the items in the program been selected and pruned in vigorous city council debate, the taxpayers would have been far more sure, in all likelihood, that all these works were necessary. Before the program goes again to the electors, as it may next spring, the mayor and aldermen could well pull it apart and give every section a new, critical, public examination.

Changed Man

MR. Max Saltzman: . . . I like to think back to the days when the postmaster general was not in the cabinet, perhaps even to those days before he was running for the leadership of the Liberal Party. In those days I think he made some of the finest statements ever made in this country with regard to the possibilities for the future of Canada. He had great idealism and courage then. What has happened to that idealism and courage in the intervening period? An hon. Member: He has been clobbered by Benson.

Canada and the OAS—II

A Regional Concentration of Power

THE abrupt change in the nature and function of the Organization of American States with the Caracas Declaration created no alarm in Canada.

Few people realized that it was the assertion of the right of any 34 foreign ministers in the Americas to decree armed intervention in Canadian internal affairs. Those who did realize the implications of the change, were comforted that at least a two-thirds majority was required, so that a single trigger-happy administration would be unlikely to precipitate a crisis; and that no intervention would ever be authorized unless there were a clear and present danger of a Communist coup—a most unlikely development in Canada.

However, some uneasiness about the change of the OAS from a defensive to a coercive role had certainly developed. The Declaration of Caracas had been rammed through the 10th Conference by John Foster Dulles, using highly questionable methods, and it had been put to use immediately in the coercion of Guatemala. The odor of this affair was still strong when President Kennedy visited Ottawa in 1960. On this occasion he reversed a long-standing American policy, and issued a clear invitation for Canada to join the OAS.

"Your country and mine," he told a joint session of the Senate and the House of Commons, "are partners in North American affairs; can we not become partners in inter-American affairs?" Neither in official Ottawa nor among the Canadian public was this invitation received with any enthusiasm.

The wisdom of this invitation was clearly demonstrated by a further remarkable development in the evolution of the OAS from a nominally defensive to an essentially coercive institution. On April 28, 1965, President Johnson ordered the U.S. Marines to invade the Dominican Republic. The invasion was represented initially as a "rescue mission" to protect American lives endangered by civil disorder. Since this was precisely the kind of reason for military action ruled out by Articles 15 and 17 of the OAS charter, the invasion was quickly re-defined to bring it under the terms of the Declaration of Caracas.

The U.S. embassy on the island issued to the press a list of 53 names of alleged Communists who were alleged to be inspiring the civil disorder. On May 2, President Johnson declared that "what began as a popular democratic revolution that was committed to democracy and social justice moved into the hands of a band of 'communist operators'." The House of Representatives in the U.S. passed by a vote of 315 to 52 a resolution asserting that unilateral intervention by the United States was justified on the territory of any nation which "regarded itself threatened by 'internal' communist, directly or indirectly, and a veritable Harrison announced in Montevideo that the principle of non-intervention, which had been fundamental to the concept of the OAS, was obsolete.

The 23,000-man U.S. force assisted the military government of General Imbert to restore order; a cloak of legality was then, thrown over the operation with an ex post facto endorsement by the requisite majority of the OAS, and by the despatch of a few token troops from some Latin American countries to join the U.S. occupation force.

The Dominican incident established two further precedents, which are both now parts of the OAS theoretical structure. The first is that the United States (and presumably any other member state) may invade the territory of another state in the OAS defence zone without waiting for any authorization from a Meeting of Consultation.

The second precedent is that, while the only excuse for an invasion remains the threat of a Communist takeover, this excuse can be offered on the flimsiest of evidence.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Wall Street Journal pointed out that, under the new doctrine, in order for President Johnson to authorize the invasion, "it was never necessary to satisfy himself that the revolution was Communist-controlled, or that it would produce another Cuba. The point was that it might."

The evidence of Communist penetration in the Dominican Republic was little more substantial than the similar mish-mash of half-truths and paranoid conjectures that was circulated by extreme right-

To Inflation

Only One Answer

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE

I WISH the Opposition would stop blaming the government for high prices, unless they are prepared to advocate price and wage controls.

Robert Stanfield was quick to spot the inconsistency of one cabinet member, Agriculture Minister Ron Olson, applauding the rise in beef prices while another, Consumers Affairs Minister Ron Basford, deplored it. But Stanfield's own position is not less politically motivated. Neither Olson nor Basford had anything to do with the beef rise and the Conservative leader knows it.

The Ontario Farmers Union wants Basford to resign because of his support for the beef boycott. Any minute now the Consumers Association will call for Olson's head because he stood up for the farmers and is therefore acting against the interests of the housewife.

Prime Minister Trudeau gets off the hook by declaring that both ministers' statements were "spontaneous" and "correct." That means, presumably, that they have a right to their opinions, especially since their opinions were in such close harmony with those of their respective constituents.

The price of beef is only a small part of the inflationary binge, anyhow; it may only be temporary and at least can be countered by consumer resistance. No such remedy exists for the inflated prices of most other goods and services: housing, for example. You can't boycott the new houses that are being built or the old ones coming on the market without making the sacrifice of having to put your family into an apartment. Yet, paradoxically, the only investment or savings worth a dime today is property, a house the Latin American countries would welcome Canadian membership in the alliance, since Canada would provide something of a counter-weight to the overwhelming power of the United States in determining the policy of the OAS and in directing its military adventures. This argument overlooks the second practical difficulty: the fact that Canada is almost totally dependent on the goodwill of other countries to transport and supply our effective military force—in a distant combat zone.

In view of this sorry record, it is rather surprising to find a few voices, including that of at least one cabinet minister, advocating in 1969 that Canada should join the OAS.

Apart from the folly of embroiling ourselves in the internal conflicts of people on another continent, the proposal that Canada join the OAS raises two important practical difficulties.

The first of these is that our armed forces are strictly limited in size and are already over-committed by our alliances in the Northern Hemisphere. To take on additional commitments to police and coerce the Southern Hemisphere would require a considerable expansion of our armed forces in all branches. It would be very difficult to convince the Canadian taxpayer that he was getting value for his money through this addition to our responsibilities and this inflation of our costs.

It is sometimes argued that

These two practical reasons have suffered so far, to keep Canada out of the OAS, but there are much stronger grounds, both legal and moral, for remaining outside the alliance. In spite of the high principles written into the Charter of the OAS, particularly in Articles 15 and 17, the organization has degenerated into an institution for the coercion of the weak by the strong. For Canada to join now would be to concede both the totally illegal claim of the OAS to exercise sovereignty over Canada, under the Treaty of Rio, but would signify Canadian approval of OAS actions towards Guatemala, Cuba, the Dominican Republic and, ultimately, similar action towards Canada herself.

The OAS was set up primarily to consider "the participation of America in the future world organization, and the further measures that should be taken to strengthen the inter-American system and the economic solidarity of the continent." Shorn of its verbiage, this simply means that it was a device to deny the United Nations any jurisdiction over the Western Hemisphere, while ensuring the existence of a solid block of American votes in the United Nations sufficient to ensure an American majority on most questions and at least an American veto on all "important questions" in the UN Assembly.

Largely because the OAS has worked as a centrally-controlled power bloc, the United Nations has failed to work as a satisfactory forum for the resolution of international disputes. Since the only hope of the smaller nations to maintain any semblance of independence in the nuclear age lies in the creation of strong, impartial and dependable world institutions, the arrogation of power by regional organizations such as the OAS is a major disaster.

Canadian policy, if it is to serve the nation and humanity, must work towards the elimination of regional concentrations of power, and towards the strengthening of genuinely international institutions such as the United Nations and its agencies.

We could bring prices down overnight by voluntary self-restraint, but we won't; we will go right on dishonestly blaming the government for inflation because we know it won't do anything about high prices. If it ever tried such a thing, we would vote in a new government.

Looking for Support

NLF's 'Government' Faces Big Problem

By MARK FRANKLAND From Saigon

THE National Liberation Front's self-transformation into a "provisional revolutionary government" (PRG) has generally been written off as meaningless by officials in Saigon.

What sort of a government is it, they ask, that has no permanent seat in the country it claims to govern? And it is certainly true that even if the Viet Cong forces were to occupy some provincial town in order to set up their government they could not possibly hope to hold it. The Americans could bomb it out of existence in a matter of hours.

Saigon also claims that the new government means no more than sticking a new label on an old product. People here point out that the members of the government come entirely from the National Liberation Front and the "Alliance of National, Democratic and Peace Forces" (which was set up by the Front last year to attract professional people and intellectuals reluctant to join the Front itself). It therefore represents no new gain in popular support for the Front.

There are however other Vietnamese who are not quite so unconcerned about the Front's new move as President Thieu's government in Saigon professes to be. They see it as a manoeuvre which, though reflecting no actual increase in the Front's strength, could in time add to its prestige and power at the negotiation table. They also suspect—though here they are for the moment just speculating—that the Front's claim to be a government could also affect attitudes towards it in South Vietnam.

As far as the Paris talks are concerned, the creation of the Provisional Revolutionary Government may achieve three things for the Front. First it appears to put the guerrillas on an equal footing with Saigon. This is particularly true in the artificial world of diplomatic negotiations where names and formulas often count for more than their real worth.

Secondly, the existence of a "government" whose members are all southerners is itself a claim (justified or not) for NLF independence from Hanoi. It also confirms what is already written in the Front's program that it is not the guerrillas' aim to bring the South into immediate unity with the North. This is a comforting idea to many people here.

Lastly, the PRG, with its apparatus of ministers and presidential councils obfuscates more than ever the mechanism by which the People's Revolutionary Party (the South Vietnamese Communists) controls the NLF.

Within South Vietnam itself the PRG is clearly meant to have most impact on the educated bourgeois—teachers, students, businessmen, civil servants and officers.

The PRG is made up almost entirely of people from this class. Some, like its president, Mr. Huynh Tan Phat and its vice-president and minister of the interior, Mr. Phung Van Cung, are key members of the Front and are almost certainly Communist Party members. But positions of lesser importance have been given to people who joined the Alliance last year. Ranging from student leaders to teachers and businessmen, most of these people are well-known in Saigon. Only a minority of them are believed to be Communist. The significance of the others is that as non-Communists they have shown their belief that it is necessary to co-operate with the Front. Their presence in the PRG is the Front's way of showing in turn that it is ready to work with "patriotic" non-Communists and that its aim is not the immediate creation of a Communist state. (This point is also made in the NLF's political program but it is more effective to demonstrate it in practice.)

The appearance of the PRG follows on reports of considerable efforts by the Viet Cong army to find allies for its peace plan. Its success is impossible to judge, since the atmosphere in Saigon does not encourage people to speak publicly about such things. If the Front were to succeed with its demand for a coalition government—which it should be stressed, seems at the moment unlikely—there would very likely be a decent number of people of standing in Saigon who, for different reasons, would be ready to accept the PRG.

But the problem facing the PRG is that it must show some sign of success in achieving its aim before the people will dare speak out. Whatever the PRG may say about the Saigon government, the latter's police are effective enough when it comes to controlling open political dissent.

Ingenuous Design

The Vikings' Ships

By ROLAND HUNTFORD from Roskilde, Denmark

THE first Viking merchant ship ever to be found is now on view at a museum opened at Roskilde, near Copenhagen. An archaeological first, it is the only existing specimen of Norse commercial boatbuilding. Four more hulls are under reconstruction, including the first long ship to be discovered. This was the type of warship used by the Vikings in their raids on Britain and Northern Europe.

Dating from about 1000 A.D., these were all working vessels. Other Viking craft have been excavated before, notably the Oseberg and Gokstad boats in Oslo, but they were burial ships, built differently from the vessels in everyday use. Hitherto, the Roskilde ships have only been known through Danish church murals and the Bayeux Tapestry.

The ships were discovered in 1962 by an amateur skidiviner in a channel called Frederiksdig, that connects the port of Roskilde with the open sea. In 1957, the Danish National Museum in Copenhagen began salvaging the remains, finishing the work in 1962.

Reconstructing the "vessels" was one of the most difficult jobs ever undertaken by the museum. The hulls had fallen to pieces and flattened out after 900 years at the bottom of the sea. They had been filled with stones and sunk as blockships to defend Roskilde against pirate raids.

Piece by piece, the hulls were lifted, dried and preserved in glycol. Drying and preservation lasted two years; reconstruction of the first hull took almost five years. Archaeologists were beaten by the difficulties of bending the parts to their original shape but a local boatbuilder succeeded. In his daily work he seemed to understand and to be carrying on a tradition that can be traced back to the Viking age.

About two-thirds of the merchant ship survived immersion. But the museum decided not to replace missing parts, which is the usual practice. Instead—a framework of metal strips was built to take the place of the caulking where the planks remained, and its project the contours of the hull elsewhere. In this way, claim the museum's archaeologists, a more authentic impression is conveyed.

Mr. Olaf Olsen, an archaeologist and specialist in medieval shipbuilding, who supervised the work, says that the vessel is "a fantastic piece of naval architecture. Tough and seaworthy, it is a deep sea trader, although an open boat, and Mr. Olsen says that it would have been far safer than any other type of ocean-going ship built before the 16th century.

The Roskilde vessel could easily have crossed the Atlantic, says Mr. Olsen, and he believes that similar craft were voyaged by the Norsemen for their voyages to Vinland, which is the name given in the Sagas for North America. Excavations in Newfoundland have turned up the remains of an 11th-century Norse colony; at Roskilde there is now the evidence that the Vikings had the ships to sail there directly. Mr. Olsen says that it is now clear that the Norsemen had far better ships in 1000 A.D. than the "floating barrels," Columbus had to deal with five centuries later.

The Roskilde merchant ship has an overall length of about 50 feet, and a beam of 14 feet. It has raised decks at both ends, and a hold amidships which could take some five to 10 tons of cargo. It is broader than the long ships, which were designed to cut the choppy waves of the North Sea. An ocean-going trader would have to rise to the Atlantic swell.

Mr. Olsen hopes that his exhibit will encourage boat-builders to learn from the past. "The ship is ingeniously designed," he says, "and it is far ahead of its time. It is rigid longitudinally, but extremely elastic in torsion. It is clinker-built in a special manner, with the ends of the keel left free. I think that if designers of fishing-boats or yachts cut through the prejudices of the past 500 or 600 years to experiment with soft boats again, they would find that the Vikings have something to teach them about speed, seaworthiness, and ease of riding the waves."

There may be more to learn when the remaining ships are on view. Besides the long ship, there are two Baltic traders and a small fishing-boat.

Asian Plan Acceptable If Without Military Overtones

India Favorable to Russian Moves

India would endorse Russian moves to set up a new grouping of Asian nations — as long as it had no military overtones, senior Indian officials have indicated to their Japanese counterparts here.

The officials, here with their prime minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, on a six-day state visit discussed with Japanese officials recent indications by the Russians that they are planning new initiatives in Asia.

Both Indian and Japanese officials agreed that they had far too few clues yet to even guess at what Leonid Brezhnev

By MARK MURRAY
From Tokyo

had in mind when he spoke recently of the possible need for a new collective security system in Asia.

Mrs. Gandhi told her hosts that the Soviet premier, Alexei Kosygin, during his recent visit to India did not mention any new military organization.

But there were suggestions from him that Russia would support a new body designed to improve regional political and economic co-operation. And the Indian party indicated that India approved of this idea as long as the grouping was not overtly anti-Chinese in character.

Economics was the main topic on the agenda of the talks between Mrs. Gandhi and Japanese ministers and the sari-clad Indian premier provides a model exercise in seeking aid with dignity.

Japan agreed in principle to resume aid for development projects in India, although how much and what projects have still to be negotiated. Mrs. Gandhi concentrated hard on selling India as an attractive spot for Japanese investment.

Some Indian officials even talked — probably over-optimistically — of Japanese business shifting some of its labor-intensive industry to India where labor is plentiful.

The over-riding impression was that India was seeking to inject some warmth into relations with Japan which have been correct rather than close in the past.

'Righteous Conservatism' Administration's Hallmark

Nixon Team Shows Its Colors

By CARL T. ROWAN, from Washington

Every federal administration quickly takes on a special mood, quality, color.

The Kennedy administration brought youthful dash and vigor to Washington. The flair, the special grace, the articulate emphasis on hopes and dreams and promises enthralled millions of Americans. Never mind the fact that John F. Kennedy was finding it difficult to deal with Congress or to turn those dreams and promises into reality.

Activism was the watchword of the Johnson administration. No problem, large or small, was to go unmet by some legislative proposal. Johnson sought to outdo Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal in his efforts to build a "Great Society."

So it was that that Administration was characterized by a variety of innovations and adventures in broadening educational opportunities, expanding civil rights, protecting consumers, and so forth.

The thing that distinguished the Nixon administration for the first half year was the absence of any clear mood or commitment.

Finally, in the last several days we have gotten enough signs to begin to have some idea of what will be the mark of the Nixon administration.

I suppose we might best call it "righteous conservatism." For this administration seems clearly determined — always with noble motive — to nudge back the clock ever so gently in several areas of American life.

Attorney General John Mitchell wants the courts to endorse his theory that the executive branch has carte blanche to wiretap, without court supervision or jurisdiction, the telephone of anyone thought to "use unlawful means to attack and subvert the existing structure of government."

This is one of the most ominous ideas ever to come out of the justice department, but the administration cloaks the dangers in a righteous concern for "national security."

As part of a laudable objective of closing tax loopholes, the Nixon administration wants to forbid tax-exempt foundations from using funds to influence the outcome of any election or to serve any partisan political interests.

This seemingly unassailable stance becomes questionable, however, when one observes that the proposal is now worded in such a way to prevent foundations from financing programs to register Negroes to vote in the South.

Since an overwhelming maajority of Negroes vote Democratic these days, it is not especially in the interest of the Republican party or of the politicians who gave Nixon his most effective support in the South for massive Negro registration programs to continue.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has called for a law forbidding the distribution of "inflammatory propaganda" by revolutionary groups in the United States.

It is a worrisome commentary on the philosophy of this administration that the vice president wants to rush headlong into the perilous ground of creating a group of bureaucrats to decide what is "inflammatory propaganda" and what is not or even what is or is not a "revolutionary group."

Not all this administration's subtle lapses into conservatism can be gilded with a righteous rationale. The back-and-forth hubbub over the proposed appointment of Dr. John H. Knowles as HEW's assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs was clearly occasioned by a desire to please the American Medical Association.

Knowles was to liberal for the AMA; the AMA has contributed handsomely to the political campaigns of several Republicans; so what else did Nixon need in the way of a recommendation against Knowles? His fellow Republicans gave this rationale openly.

So that is how it is done now. No one makes pro-segregation statements, or says enough Negroes are voting already, or denounces the constitutional ban on unwarranted searches, or proposes censorship, or condemns Medicaid and Medicare. But there is a constant chipping at the edges of all these areas. It is "resurgent" conservatism by shrewd encroachment.

Threat to Democracy Feared

Political Scientists Sense Danger in German Coalition

By JOE ALEX MORRIS, from Wesseling

As seen from the ivory tower, the German political situation today is depressing if not altogether morbid.

This was the trend of opinion expressed by German and American political scientists who met in this West German city to discuss the state of the federal republic after 28 years of existence.

It was attended by 22 professors, including Dr. Carl J. Friedrich of Harvard and Hans J. Morgenthau of Chicago, as well as Germany's Interior Minister Ernst Benda and other leading German academicians and politicians.

The meeting, first of its kind, was organized with a review of the state of affairs in the main theme. But the subject quickly narrowed down to an analysis of the "Grand Coalition," in which the two major German parties with 50 per cent of the votes in the federal parliament, have been running the country for the past 2½ years.

The consensus of the panelists and floor speakers was that the grand coalition is unhealthy and endangers future political development toward democracy. There were, of course, differing opinions and widely varying shades of meaning, but these trends stood out as both important and acknowledged a wide measure of agreement:

• Grand coalitions are unhealthy because they tend to drive the opposition vote to non-democratic extremes. In Germany's case, this meant the far-right National Democratic Party (NDP).

• Such a coalition leads to a diffusion of responsibility for making decisions which only confuses and sours the voter.

• This particular coalition had failed to accomplish one of the main tasks which led to its formation — electoral reform which would tend to eliminate splinter parties of the radical right and left.

Perhaps the most depressing view was expressed by Prof. Morgenthau, who said the grand coalition was a case where a government crisis "is transforming itself into a crisis of the democratic system."

With the two major parties amalgamated, "the essence of democracy is still further diminished," he said. "It becomes difficult if not impossible to place particular responsibility on a particular person."

This results in a lack of decision on the part of the German voter, he said, and drives the opposition voter "outside the democratic framework."

Morgenthau's views were backed up by Prof. Rudolf Wildermann of Mannheim University, one of West Germany's best known political scientists and public opinion researchers. He stressed that since the inception of the grand coalition, opposition to the whole democratic political establishment had been increasing.

This opposition was reflected in voter indecisions, which is running about 30 per cent, perhaps 10 per cent more than normally expectable at this stage of an election year. His opinion was backed up by Dr. Hans Friedrichs of the Free Democratic Party, who predicted that 24 to 40 per cent of the voters would go against the grand coalition parties.

appear to accept co-wives, who usually take the role of companion and work mate. The presence of a second, third or fourth wife is regarded as a sign of wealth in the family.

Probably the most deeply entrenched among the Baluya tribe who live in Kenya's Western area and spill into Uganda. Among this tribe every wife attempts to produce as much food as she can so the family can use the money to buy more goods each year.

One Baluya leader, Ishmael Owiro, who lives in Kenya's South Nyanza district near Lake Victoria, has 11 wives and 66 children—eliminating any need of a labor force to work his farm.

His wives and children in fact are the only occupants of Kanjira village which has among other things its own school and chapel.

Said one expert on polygamy, "In America and Europe where polygamy is illegal, many keep changing partners through divorce. This brings such societies closer to polygamy than they would care to think."

Together with Kenya's stated policy of increasing its indigenous population, this could give polygamous marriages in the country a bright future.

African Religious Leaders Switch Attitudes

REUTERS, from Nairobi

Churches in Kenya are taking a new look at polygamy following a recent meeting here of the All-Africa Conference of Churches.

The conference—representing churches in Uganda, Zambia, Kenya, Ghana, Cameroon, Nigeria, Liberia, Malawi and Ethiopia—decided the church probably was wrong in its initial decision to bar polygamous families from memberships and decided to take a more lenient attitude in the future.

"The law barring polygamous families from church membership might have done the church more harm than good," the conference said in its communiqué on the meeting.

Polygamy is legal in Kenya and church experts feel any church law which attempts to interfere with this traditional way of life will cause social disruption without being effective. They also feel that as other parts of the world are taking a freer attitude toward morals as a whole, polygamy is hardly an issue any longer.

There are strict rules surrounding the marriage of a man to more than one wife in Kenya. Usually the first wife holds a higher position in the marriage than other wives.

Kenya has a long tradition of polygamy and most women

Kaiser Should Move Fast

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

The sale of the 2,500,000 shares of Kaiser Resources takes place this week; and the feeling in the investment industry is that despite the uncertain stock market, they will go fast. This represents one-quarter of the total shares of the Canadian subsidiary of Kaiser Steel of San Francisco. The parent company will continue to hold the remaining 75 per cent.

It is the aim of the company to have a good shareholding representation in British Columbia, because all the coal and all the handling and the transportation of the coal on its way to Japan will be in this province.

COMMON SHARES

The common shares are of $1 par value and they are being offered to the public at $12. No dividends have been paid as yet and the prospectus says the dividend policy will be determined by the directors on the basis of availability of earnings coupled with debt retirement and other financial requirements of the company.

There is no restriction on dividends, provided the company's loans are not in default.

FIVE YEARS

The company estimates its earnings for the next five years — 1970, $1.07 a share; 1971, $2.15; 1972, $2.42; 1973, $2.01; 1974, $1.05.

The sharp drop in net earnings in 1974 is due to the fact that Kaiser Resources will by that time have run out of its three-year tax holiday allowed mining and similar companies under Canadian regulations for new operations. However, it is pointed out that by 1974, Kaiser hopes to have other marketing outlets above those contracts already signed with Mitsubishi of Japan, to improve the earnings picture in later years.

The Mitsubishi contracts are in three parts involving a total of 116,700,000 tons of coal over a period of 15 years.

The main source of raw material is the Balmer deep coal reserve of 174,452,000 tons.

Believing that the modern methods of mining and the unit train principle which will be used to take the coal to tidewater at Roberts Bank will make the Fernie coal competitive in many parts of the world, Kaiser is seeking further contracts for its coking coal and coke in Canada, United States, Europe and Latin America.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS

In the past, in order to find a market for Rocky Mountain area coal the Canadian government has had to make subvention payments to the coal mining companies.

Kaiser's open pit mining methods and low cost transportation have made such subsidy no longer necessary.

DOMAN TO MEET

An extraordinary general meeting has been called July 11 by Doman Industries at its head office in Duncan to vote on a proposed split of the common stock, three-for-one.

If carried, the holders of the Series A preferred shares will have the privilege of converting into the new common on the basis of four common for one preferred.

The preferred shares at present may be switched into common at the rate of four for three. The proposed split will obviate conversion fractions.

IMPROVED RESULTS

An interim report covering 10 months of the current fiscal year to May 31, gives the net income of Hayes-Dana at $2,193,000 (81 cents a share), an increase of 91 per cent from the corresponding period a year ago.

The Thorold, Ont., car parts manufacturing company also reported a sales increase of 23 per cent to $32,116,000.

A 30-per-cent interest in the Danish parts manufacturing firm of BJM or Borgense is also announced. Both firms make similar agricultural drive lines and slip clutches.

SEMINAR PLANNED

Top officials of Investors Overseas Services (IOS) are coming to Victoria this week to conduct a three-day advanced training seminar for its sales personnel in Western Canada.

The Geneva-based company, one of the largest international firms handling mutual funds in many parts of the world, hopes the president, Allan Cantor, will fly over from Switzerland to take part along with Ira Weinstein, president of IOS Canada. IOS operates the Regent Fund and IOS Venture Fund in Canada with combined assets of more than $100,000,000.

"Rather more than half the assets of these two funds are invested in Canadian companies," says Gordon Champion, former life insurance man, now co-manager of IOS office in Victoria.

Mortgage Rate Cut by Ottawa

OTTAWA (UPI) — Interest rates on Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation loans have been reduced from 9% to 8 per cent, effective immediately, the CMHC said Monday.

The drop came as the result of amendments to the National Housing Act — they received the ceremonial royal assent Friday, CMHC president H. W. Hignett said.

"For the time being the rate to be charged by CMHC for direct homeowner loans will be 8 per cent," Hignett said.

The amendments freed CMHC rates from government regulation and were designed to put home owners on the same footing with other borrowers in the capital market.

Hignett stressed that the new interest rate was subject to change, depending on competition among approved lenders under the National Housing Act. He said the rates would, in the future, "reflect only market conditions."

CORTINA

The real folks wagon

A wagon should be built to comfortably carry people and take a load up to the cottage or down to the beach. That's a real folk's wagon. It's called Cortina.

The Cortina Deluxe Wagon has more room for people and cargo than any other wagon in its class. With the seats unfolded for sitting, the Cortina Wagon comfortably seats 5 adults. As for ride, Cortina's wide track and longer wheelbase ensures smooth, effortless, comfortable riding — almost anywhere. The interior is finished in attractive vinyl that stands up to hard wear. There's full carpeting in the passenger area and the seats are foam padded.

With the rear seat neatly folded, you have 70.5 cubic feet of load space — that's 8.5 cubic feet more than the closest competition. And the Cortina Wagon has a big 1600cc engine, yet it's easy on gas.

Power brakes (front disc, drum rear) are standard equipment. The transmission is 4-speed fully synchronized, or you can choose the 3-speed fully automatic. Other standard features include Aeroflow Ventilation with air extractors that keep the air circulating and fresh. Rear safety door locks are child-proof. And even though Cortina has a larger capacity than anything in its class, it has a turning circle of only 30' so it's easy to handle in the toughest traffic.

See your selected Ford or Mercury Dealer. He also sells six Cortina sedans in three different series — the Cortina GT, the Cortina Deluxe, and the Cortina.

Engine Rips Jetliner

'Nerves Shivering For Hours After'

TORONTO (CP) — The little girl with the chocolate-brown hair skipped off CP Air's Empress of Honolulu flight Monday and talked about "sleeping right through" an air emergency over the Atlantic 24 hours earlier.

Barbara Allen, 9, daughter of a Toronto real-estate broker, William Allen, laughed as her father explained how he tried to keep the rest of his family cool and calm when an engine cowl flung off a CPA DC-8 jetliner and ripped holes in its fuselage.

The airplane, with 250 persons aboard, turned back to Shannon, Ireland, where Capt. Neal Carey, 46, of Vancouver made a perfect landing.

The Allens were on vacation in Europe with their three children.

Russell, 12, said he was "scared" but Mr. Allen's wife Maureen said she had no trouble with Susan, 6.

Mr. Allen said he was standing near the galley where pieces of the engine cowl flung off.

"The air started to escape through holes in the skin," he said.

At that point Capt. Carey took the plane down from 35,000 feet and began the slow, four-hour flight back to Shannon, 600 miles away.

Dorothy Barron of Hamilton said: "Everyone was calm after the initial shock. But inside our nerves were just shivering for hours."

"The stewardesses were wonderful. But I was looking at two of them in the galley when the explosion hit. 'What's that?' one of them asked. Then the purser spoke to them and they calmed right down. They started to smile and they were just wonderful."

Honeymooners Harold and Marilyn Burke said they weren't at all worried. They were sitting near the damage on the starboard side and could see the wires hanging off No. 3 engine.

Harvey Bonnard, a Toronto chartered accountant, said the pilot was "fantastic. He brought the plane into Shannon really smoothly."

VEGETARIAN GROUP
Tour operator Eileen Valentine said the trip was organized by the Toronto Natural Hygiene Society, a vegetarian group.

The 203 passengers and 10 infants arrived direct from Shannon aboard a DC-8 taken out of regular service. Another 35 passengers arrived in Montreal aboard an Irish International Airlines flight.

John Havelock, Sarnia, Ont. and wife Katherine were among those in crippled DC-8. They're shown on arrival at Toronto Monday night after another CPA flight.—(CP)

Hamilton Blast Kills One

HAMILTON (CP) — One man was killed and seven injured Monday when a concrete steam curing oven exploded and flew through a wall, across several back yards and crushed several cars outside an auto body repair shop.

Dead is Felice Russo, 41, of Hamilton, one of a 10-man work crew in the building.

Three of the injured men were in critical condition while the others were in fair condition.

Gunman Shoots Two Yugoslavs

BERLIN (AP) — A Croatian gunman wounded the chief of the Yugoslav military mission and killed the mission's janitor in the finger in a scuffle at the mission in West Berlin, authorities said.

Police identified the assailant only as Drago D. Zr, a Croatian of Yugoslav citizenry.

The mission chief, Dr. Anton Kolendic, was shot once in the head and twice in the leg, but a hospital spokesman said his condition is not critical. The janitor, Stanko Golob, was treated and released from hospital.

Police said the assailant had lived in West Berlin until May 1968, when he moved to Hamburg, West Germany.

Deputy Mayor Kurt Nebauer, who lives across the street from the mission, gave the following account:

The gunman entered the mission and asked for a Yugoslav passport, demanding that the mission chief personally handle the case.

Kolendic, another mission employee and the janitor, were in an outer waiting room. The visitor, told the mission was closed, pulled out a gun and ordered the three mission personnel to kneel before him. In the ensuing scuffle, the mission chief was shot three times and the janitor once, but they overpowered their assailant.

Crown Like No Other

CAERNARVON, WALES (UPI) — The crown that Prince Charles wears at his investiture today as Prince of Wales is nothing like any other ever seen. As one critic said, "You'll either love it or hate it."

In place of previous crowns that looked as heavy as they felt, designers produced a sort of space-age coronet — of graceful arcs and gold bent in modernistic, streamlined angles.

It is, at three pounds, roughly three times lighter than it would have been had it been produced by traditional methods.

It is "dramatically 20th century," said designer and maker Louis Osman, I have tried to make something that is modern.

He said there was "no lavish expenditure on ostentation."

The crown has none of the heavy jewels traditionally associated with royal headgear. It has 37 gems — 75 diamonds and 12 emeralds. The main structure is in 24 carat gold and the crosses that adorn its sides in 22 carat Welsh gold reinforced with platinum.

The crown was produced in a chemical bath from a wax model.

Not everybody likes the modern-style crown. Tailor and Cutter, the frequently-irreverent monitor of British men's fashion, described it as "somewhere between a barbed wire crown of thorns and a faint facsimile of the unknown political prisoner."

Guns Stolen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten handguns, articles of jewelry and a camera were taken by thieves who raided the Vancouver home of Dr. S. A. McFetridge.

Anti-Bomb Gear In Wings For Investiture

CAERNARVON, Wales (UPI) — If anyone plants a bomb in Caernarvon castle on Prince Charles' investiture day Tuesday, Maj. Clifton Jeffries' team of bomb disposal experts have an impressive array of James Bond equipment to deal with it.

The Royal Army Ordnance Corps team is temporarily based in Caernarvon with a convoy of emergency vehicles and a helicopter standing by at a second's notice in case of a bomb alert.

Jeffries told about the equipment which his men use:

X-RAY MACHINES

"We have two means of x-raying a satchel or brief case to see what's inside. We have a portable x-ray machine which can be run off the main electricity or a portable generator. We also have a radioactive source which is quick and easy to use but doesn't give quite such a clear picture."

"We also have a device which can cut into an object by remote control and we can freeze the contents of it."

Down in May

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forty-nine fewer people died in British Columbia in May compared with the same month last year. According to statistics released by the British Columbia Safety Council, there were 35 accidental deaths during May, 1969, bringing the total this year to 515, down from 595 last year.

Confessions Read:

House Fired with Gasoline

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (UPI) — Signed confessions in which a brother and sister said they sprayed their house with gasoline and then ignited a fire which killed 12 members of their family were introduced Monday at a preliminary hearing.

Susan Bailey, 15, and her brother, Roger, 13, appeared before justice of the peace A. L. Rothwell. Testimony from four witnesses was heard and the hearing was continued until next week.

SIPHONED FROM CAR

"I went to bed at about 10 o'clock, woke up shortly after midnight and went to wake Roger up," Miss Bailey's statement said. "I got a siphon from the kitchen, got hold of a plastic hose and went to siphon gasoline from my father's white coupe which was parked outside. . . I first started with father and mother's room, then in every room except the bathroom.

"After emptying the gasoline in the siphon, I put it back under the sink where I first got it. Roger and I then went outside, lit a piece of paper with a lighter and tossed the burning paper through a broken window. Roger's statement said: "While Susie was spraying the gasoline, I waited in the dining room. Susie said, 'hurry up' so I started helping Susie. After Susie tossed the burning paper through the window and the house started burning, Susie and I went to the laundry and she called Johnny Bumgarner.

SURPRISE WITNESS

John Bumgarner, 18, a first cousin boyfriend of the Bailey girl, was a surprise witness at the hearing. Bumgarner testified that he and Susan were secretly engaged and that they planned to get married when she became 18.

Susan's father, Charles Bailey, 41, had ordered the girl to stop seeing Bumgarner because of their close blood relationship. According to a statement signed by Susan, she planned the fire because she was angry with her father over his efforts to break up her romance.

Roger and Susan admitted setting the Bailey home afire last June 8. Bailey, his wife, Ruby, 35, and 10 Bailey children ranging in age from six months to 17 years perished in the flames.

The two children have been charged with the murder of only their father because he was the head of the household.

Sudden Explosions Blast Freight Train

WELLS, Nev. (UPI) — An air force ordnance team waited for burning to subside Monday before moving in to investigate an explosion of ammunition and bombs which wrecked a Western Pacific freight train in the desert near here Sunday.

The cause of the explosions remained unknown. Lt. Col. Herb Tyson, commander of the 201st explosive ordnance disposal squadron from Hill Air Force Base, Ogden, Utah, said the train had been carrying an undetermined amount of 750-pound bombs.

The explosives were en route to Vietnam when they were discharged in a series of explosions that lasted several hours. Four persons were known to have been injured by the blasts, but it was possible that more victims might be found when searchers could get near the flaming wreckage.

University, Paint Shop Seattle Bomb Victims

SEATTLE (AP) — Police said Monday they had no leads in an investigation of four weekend bombings here, the worst of which blew a six-foot-wide hole in the reinforced concrete floor of the University of Washington administration building.

No one was injured, but Paul Sielner, who was in the basement when the bomb exploded at the university, said he first thought an earthquake had jolted the structure.

The blast blew out walls and ceilings, shattered windows 600 feet away in other buildings and knocked off a security patrolman's hat.

Two cars were damaged by fire bombs early Sunday morning, and Sunday night the front of a paint store was wrecked by a bomb made of explosives placed in a piece of automobile exhaust pipe. A university spokesman estimated damage would exceed $100,000.

Coody Holds Off Crampton To Capture Cleveland Open

CLEVELAND—Charles Coody clinched $22,000 first-place money in the Cleveland open, Sunday, with a birdie on the 18th hole that gave him the big, modest Texan a two-stroke final margin over Australian Bruce Crampton.

Coody scored three birdies and two bogeys on the final 18 holes for a one-under-par 69 and a nine-under 271 in four rounds on the Par 70 Aurora Country Club course.

BOOMING DRIVE

Lending the methodical Australian by only one on the 18th tee, Coody powered a 290-yard drive only six feet from the green, and was down in two for a birdie three.

Crampton, who played one round ahead of Coody, also finished with a 69 for 273. But for most of the day, the methodical 34-year-old Crampton, one of the most consistent players on the tour, trailed Coody by only one stroke.

BIRDIE PUTTS

Coody bogeyed the first hole and sank birdie putts on the fourth, fourth and sixth holes. He went to even par when he bogeyed the long par-four on 12 and held his narrow one-stroke lead over Crampton by playing even par golf until the 18th.

First place in the masters frustratingly eluded the 31-year-old veteran pro two months ago when he bogeyed the last three holes at Augusta.

"This victory is extremely satisfying," Coody said. "I was down pretty hard on myself after coming so close in the Masters. I really felt I defeated myself at Augusta."

has won more than $67,000 on the tour, the most he has ever won.

Crampton's second place finish earned him $12,000. Bob Murphy blazed around the course in 65 strokes for a five-under-par 275 total and earned third place money of $7,000.

Bert Yancey and Frank Beard finished in a tie for fourth at 276.

John Schles, in third place when the day began, had a one-over-par 71 to finish the day at 277. John Liverson, an alternate who made the tournament with a qualifier failed to show, fired a final 66 Sunday and Bob Charles, southpaw from New Zealand, hit 70 and finished two-under par at 278.

A. Bakling of Toronto shot a 71 for 288, worth $217.77.

Pre-Holiday Crowd Sets Betting Record

VANCOUVER (CP)—A crowd of 8211 wagered $322,288, a record week-day handle, at Exhibition Park racetrack Monday.

The pre-holiday crowd saw Dark Imagery and Nanahama take different routes to victory in separate divisions of the B.C. Breeders Handicap.

Showing a dazzling late run, Dark Imagery galloped to a three-and-a-half length victory in the first division and then survived a claim of foul lodged by jockey Jim Dailley aboard second-place Stakes Road. Multi-Music was a distant third.

Nanahama burst out of the gate and never looked back in the second division, winning by three quarters of a length over Regal Drum. Ballyclare was third.

Oak Bay Climbs

COWICHAN, ALBERTA—Oak Bay climbed to fourth place in the Cowichan Open golf tournament Sunday, finishing two strokes ahead of three professionals in the runner-up spot.

MacLeod scored even par 72 on Saturday and came back Sunday with a 74 for a 146 total.

Mike Graas (73-75), a former Victorian now assistant to Dick Munn at Vancouver's Point Grey, claimed the pro prize of $100 in a playoff with Ron Osh of Victoria (76-77) and Bill Carrington of Vancouver (71-77).

Next at 149 were Cowichan's Norm Boden, Bob Hunt of Uplands and Jimmy Morason of Port Alberni.

Ed Cook of Mt. Breton won the low net honor with an 83-106-35-140, one stroke ahead of Cowichan's Bob Skandl, a five-handicapper.

MacLeod Wins Cowichan Golf

COWICHAN—Amateur Al MacLeod of Gorge Vale captured the Cowichan Open golf tournament Sunday, finishing two strokes ahead of three professionals in the runner-up spot.

MacLeod scored even par 72 on Saturday and came back Sunday with a 74 for a 146 total.

Mike Graas (73-75), a former Victorian now assistant to Dick Munn at Vancouver's Point Grey, claimed the pro prize of $100 in a playoff with Ron Osh of Victoria (76-77) and Bill Carrington of Vancouver (71-77).

Former Golf Pro Fred Burns Dies

An old time friend of many Victoria golfers passed away Saturday evening in the person of Freddy Burns, former professional at the McAuley Point and Royal Colwood golf clubs.

Fred was 70 years of age and although he had suffered a heart attack some time ago, he was in firm on Saturday when he played a few holes at Gorge Vale.

He told Al Robertson, club captain that he was considering buying a new type of driver, because "it gave him greater length."

"I was deeply shocked when I heard of his death a few hours later," said Robertson.

UNTIL COURSE CLOSED

Burns became professional in succession to Walter Gravlin at McAuley Point in 1923, and he held the post until the beginning of the war in 1939, when McAuley Point was taken over by the military and closed as a golf course.

Burns who served in the army in both wars came back and joined Royal Colwood as professional in 1946. He carried on there until 1953.

He had a short spell as professional at Alberni before coming back to Victoria to join the department of national defence as a first-aid man.

ANALYTICAL MIND

"He had a keen analytical mind as a golf teacher," said Leo Derman, secretary of Gorge Vale, "and many of the best golfers in the district learned a great deal from him."

Burns served on the board of directors after becoming a Gorge Vale member.

He leaves his widow, Dorothy; two sons—Terence and Brian, both in the armed services, in Edmonton and West Germany respectively; a daughter, Mrs. W. (Lois) Fraser of Victoria; a brother, Robert E. Burns of Vancouver; two sisters, Mrs. E. Richardson and Mrs. W. Provost, of Victoria and eight grandchildren.

Services will be held in Sands Memorial on Thursday at 2 p.m. with Rev. H. B. Deney officiating. Interment will be in Hatley Memorial Gardens.

Race Veteran Snatches Win

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Veteran Roger McCluskey snatched the lead from A. J. Foyt with two laps to go and won the $30,000 Memphis 200 stock car race Sunday in weather more torrid than the action on the track.

At least six drivers, including Foyt, had to be treated for heat exhaustion as temperatures reached 98.

Victoria's Penny May Equals Own Record

KELOWNA (Special)—Penny May of Victoria Track Club continued her outstanding performance Sunday at the B.C. Junior and Juvenile track and field championships, equalling the Canadian open record for the 200-metre hurdles.

Miss May, who won the 100-metre hurdles in Canadian juvenile record time Saturday and tagged a second-place finish with a time of 36.74" in the shotput Sunday, ran the 200-metre event in 28.5 seconds to equal the mark she already shared.

MIDGET RECORD

Teammate Jill Peilend finished second in the 200 hurdles to establish a Canadian midget record of 38.1 seconds. Nanaimo's Nancy Chamberlain and Debbie Chapman, were fifth and sixth, respectively, in 31.1 and 31.4.

Among other Canadian record-breaking feats was a 206-foot, one-inch hammer toss by Gordy Geiger of Trail in the juvenile event. The performance also broke the junior open record.

Murray Keating of VTC was second with 144 feet, nine inches.

RECORD FOR RELAY

Simon Fraser University Track Club's 1600-metre junior relay team established a Canadian open mark of 3:17.0 minutes. VTC was second, more than six seconds behind.

Ken Miller of Vancouver tied the Canadian open juvenile mark with a 56.6-second time in the 400 metres.

DOUBLE WINNERS

Juveniles Arne Langdale of Victoria Mercury and Paul Washington of Cowichan Valley emerged as double winners in the two-day event.

Miss Langdale won the 200 metres in 25.0 seconds to go with her Saturday victory in the 400 metres while Washington added the 3000-metre title to his 1500-metre victory with a 9:00.4-minute run.

Other Vancouver Island winners Sunday were Myrna Lowe of Nanaimo, Dave Weicker of VTC and the VTC juvenile boys' 400-metre relay team.

Miss Lowe, fifth in the juvenile shotput, took the discus event with a throw of 111 feet, one-half inch. Sue Holland of VTC was sixth with 96.7'.

LEADS FROM START

Weicker, third in the junior 1500 metres on Saturday, took the lead from the start in the 800 on Sunday, holding off Vancouver's Rick Ritchie by a yard to win in 1:53.9. Graham Hutchison of Comox was fifth.

The VTC team of Brad Yakubowich, Dan Ryan, Ken Armstrong and Bruce Fryer, which set a B.C. record of 44.2 seconds in the heats, won the 400-metre relay event in 44.3. Nanaimo was sixth in 46.4.

OTHERS PLACE SECOND

Gaining second-place finishes were Ken Hirst of Nanaimo (16:04.4 in junior 5000 metres), Doug Temple of Victoria Spartans (42 feet, five and one-half inches in junior triple jump), Vickie Hammond of VTC (16 feet, five and one-quarter inches in junior long jump) and Jean Baldwin of Nanaimo (2:19.0 in the junior 800) gained seconds in girls' events.

Brian Mayer of Nanaimo was third in the juvenile javelin and Wendy Thompson of VTC was third in the juvenile 800 metres with teammate Connie Hallbert finishing fifth.

Greg Fraser of Spartans was fourth in the junior long jump, Patti Lovvick of Comox was fourth in the junior 200 metres and Rick Ratnagar of Cowichan was fourth in the juvenile 200 metres.

Bill Clarke of VTC earned a fifth in the junior high jump. Israeli teams fared well in the 400-metre relay for juvenile women led by a third-place finish by a VTC midget squad which established a native provincial mark of 50.4. Nanaimo "A" was fourth, Victoria "A" fifth and Nanaimo "B", sixth.

Wimbledon Favorites Move to Semi-Finals

WIMBLEDON (CP-AP)—Despite a slow start and a 90-degree weather, defending champion Billie Jean King of the United States won her match Monday at the All-England lawn tennis championship and advanced to the semi-finals in the women's singles.

With the men taking a day off from their singles, Mrs. King raised her game moments of crisis to beat Judy Tegart of Australia, 4-6, 7-5, 8-5, in a rematch of last year's final. Mrs. King is shooting for her fourth straight Wimbledon title.

OTHERS GAIN SEMIS

In other action, Rosemary Casals of the U.S. reached a berth in Wednesday's women's semifinals with a 3-6, 9-7, 7-5 win over Leslie Bowrey of Australia. Ann Jones of Britain eliminated Nancy Rickie of the U.S. with a 6-2, 7-5 victory and tournament favorite Margaret Court of Australia battled to a 4-6, 6-3 win over Julie Heldman, ranked second in the U.S.

MEN IN ACTION TODAY

Men's single play resumes today with the quarter-finals. In the men's quarter-finals Rod Laver of Australia meets Cliff Drysdale of South Africa; Bob Lutz, of the U.S. plays team-mate Arthur Ashe; John Newcombe of Australia, takes on Tom Okker of Holland, and Clark Graebner of the U.S. opposes Tony Roche of Australia. Miss Tegart, using powerful forehands, won the first set and had a 2-0 lead in the second before Mrs. King came on. She moved to 3-4 and then survived two service break points to pull even. When Miss Tegart hit a lob and a smash over the baseline in the 11th game, Mrs. King broke her and held service for the set.

In the final set, Mrs. King pulled out two of her best shots of the day—a drop and a volley—to break through at 7-6 and again survived two break points on her own service before closing the match with a driving forehand.

In early men's doubles action, the U.S. team of Arthur Ashe and Charles Pasarell bested Thomas Koch and Edison Mendez of Brazil, 1-6, 2-6, 8-6, 7-5, 6-2. Clark Graebner and Eugene Scott of the U.S. defeated Jan Jozef and Jan Kukul of Czechoslovakia, 11-9, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

The Australian team of John Newcombe and Tony Roche defeated Miguel Orantes of Spain and Vic Seixas of the U.S., 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Not Welcome

Soviet Bid Fails

BASEL, Switzerland (AP)—A Soviet bid to oust South Africa from the International Gymnastics federation failed Monday when the annual conference voted 18-9 not to include the issue on its agenda.

The Russians had proposed the expulsion of South Africa because of its apartheid policies. The decision means the large South African team is assured of taking part in the fifth world gymnastics, which opens here Wednesday.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

Ashe Refused South African Visa

LONDON (Reuters)—Tennis star Arthur Ashe of the United States said Monday he was refused a South African visa.

Informed sources said Ashe, a Negro, told a meeting of 36 members of the newly-formed International Tennis Players Association he had applied to play in the South African championships in March and his entry had been accepted by the South African Lawn Tennis Union.

But the government refused to let him into the country.

Ashe, a staunch civil rights supporter, said South Africa should be excluded from the Davis Cup and expelled from the International Lawn Tennis Federation, the sources added.

 GALWAY, Ireland (UPI) — They called the game "carnage." It is a harrowing game for Gals.
 The team, from Burrin, New Quay, and surrounding areas, had never won a single game. On Sunday it won its first match, their win celebrating onto the oyster boat Red Pink.
 Then the 29-foot vessel was hoisted and sailed to the bottom way back.
 As the death toll rose to eight Monday it was learned that five of the missing are all girls from the Camogie team. Only two bodies have been recovered.
 Ironically, the boat, which was the local Burrin post- Some — the swim supporters — were trapped in the sinking boat.
 Sally Gaylor, 14, daughter of the local Burrin post- "I saw just friends."

Protection

Referral Selling
Obsolete

New consumer protection laws which come into effect in B.C. today will make the practice of referral selling obsolete, Attorney General Leslie Peterson said Monday.

Mr. Peterson said this department will keep a close check on referral selling but added "we're not going to be looking over everybody's shoulder."

"I'm sure that once people know the law prohibits this kind of selling it will become an obsolete practice in this province."

The banning of referral sales is only one of several changes in the consumer protection law, approved at the last session of the legislature, which are now in effect.

BUYER STUCK

(Referral sales are those in which the customer supposedly has his monthly payments reduced in return for the names of other prospective purchasers. Many of those in the latter category don't make the purchase and therefore the buyer is stuck with payments he can't afford, Mr. Peterson said.)

The changes in the law also require all contracts to contain name and address of both seller and buyer, a description of the goods, price and detailed terms of payment as well as any security where credit is extended.

Mr. Peterson said as far as he is aware all reaction to the changes so far has been most favorable.

Williston Lake
'Hazard'

Sailing and boating enthusiasts have been warned to keep off Lake Williston "in the interests of general safety."

The B.C. Forest Service Monday said the lake, the largest in the province and still growing behind the Bennett Dam in the Peace River area, is subject to "frequent strong and gusty winds."

"These strong and dangerous winds come up without warning and the lake boils with whitecaps," said Peter Hemphill, chief of the engineering division of the service.

Four Attending
4-H Meeting

Four delegates from Victoria will attend the annual provincial 4-H Club week, at Vernon from July 6 to 12.

Elizabeth Webb; Russell Trace, Garry Callander and Danny Speller will attend the week-long program which will include studies of communica-

Ken Kiernan, Minister of Travel Industry, Monday announced British Columbia had the highest increase in tourist travel in Canada for the month of May this year.

Mr. Kiernan said the increase amounted to 35 per cent as compared to 28.3 for Quebec and 27.4 for Nova Scotia.

Strikers Offer Repairs

Telephone Cables Hacked Up Again

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two more British Columbia Telephone cables were severed Monday by a strike by 6,300 employees.

The Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C., disavowing any endorsement of violence or vandalism, offered earlier to repair any company equipment sabotaged.

The company declined the offer concerning Monday's cable-cutting but said that it might be necessary to accept the federation's help if other incidents occurred.

Two cables carrying 900 and 1,200 pairs were severed with an axe Monday in suburban Co-quitlam, following the hacksaw cutting of a 500-pair line in Burnaby Sunday.

Service was disrupted to more than 1,000 customers.

Police were called in to investigate a weekend incident in which a repair truck had three tires flattened and a worker's sticker placed on the windshield.

NO END SIGHTED

There is still no end in sight to the strike by the employees, seeking higher wages.

The strike, which spread Friday to the Vancouver Island, Interior and Northern Divisions, was called following the federation's rejection of a proposal that would have given employees a 17.5 per cent raise.

The federation is asking for a 32.1 per cent wage hike in a two year agreement. Current rates range from $1.45 an hour to $5.38 an hour.

BOYCOTT ENDORSED

Meanwhile the striking Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union, changed its stand and endorsed a boycott of Imperial Oil products by the British Columbia Federation of Labor.

A joint statement issued by the federation and the union Monday said "we are hopeful that this united action... will bring the industry to its senses."

Also Monday, work halted on a $7,000,000 extension to the Bayshore Inn in downtown Vancouver as construction workers refused to cross picket lines set up by the OCAW. The pickets were placed when Imperial Oil products were seen at the site.

PAY RAISE

The union seeks a $1 an hour pay raise on rates ranging from $2.95 to $4.97 hourly.

An unfair labor practices complaint has been filed against Tilden Rent-A-Car after three employees were fired Friday.

A spokesman for the Office and Technical Employees Union said the suit was filed after the union sought certification for 40 Tilden employees in three Lower Mainland offices.

The 103 Greater Vancouver supermarkets remained closed Monday in the fifth week of a dispute involving 1,300 grocery clerks and 800 meatcutters.

Employees of W. H. Malkin Ltd. in Prince Rupert, Prince George, Victoria and Dawson Creek Monday voted to accept hourly pay increases of 66 to 70 cents over two years.

UNION MEMBER?

The firm's Vancouver area employees accepted the same agreement eight days ago, ending a strike-lockout situation.

Meanwhile, Bert Johns, of Vancouver, general secretary of the telephone company's plant division, said he was reluctant to think that a union member was responsible for any sabotage.

"We have told the company that we will repair the damage without pay," he said, "but they haven't taken us up on the offer."

"At the same time we should remember that there was an instance of cable cutting even before we came out on strike, so that this could just be a case of a nut running loose," he said.

"Most of our members are too busy on the picket line or at union headquarters to have time for sabotage, and I can't think of anyone with the inclination," he said.

Mr. Johns said that while wages have been emphasized in press reports of negotiation, they are not the most important thing from the union standpoint.

"One thing we want is a different agreement on the implementation of the new 7½ hour week," he said.

THREE TIMES YEARLY

He said the union would like to take the extra half an hour, a week at a time, three times a year.

"In the city a half-hour less a shift would be little advantage, we would still be fighting traffic five times a week, anyway," he said.

"In any case an eight-hour day is easier to work with in shifts. The company has conceded that giving us the time in this form would cost no more, but they just refuse to implement it."

He said the union also wants to see pension benefits, and would like to see something done to improve morale among workers.

Monkey Dreams While in Orbit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Monday practised the three major engine-firing milestones they must pass en route to the moon while the launch crew loaded super cold fuels aboard their spaceship during a countdown test.

Biologists of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said clear radio telemetry signals from the primate in the satellite indicated dreaming during one sleep period in orbit.

FIRST TIME

They added that this was the first time such a phenomenon had been observed scientifically in any being in space.

The 14-pound male monkey has 10 hair-like steel wires embedded in his head. These monitor wave patterns from key areas of the brain, to provide the first detailed studies of brain activity under weightless conditions.

Ill-Fated 'Racer' Returns

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robin June, Vancouver pilot Neil Stevens' ill-fated vintage Tiger Moth, returned here Sunday—hitching a free ride courtesy of the department of defence.

The 1934 aircraft, which never got off the ground in the May 4 transatlantic air race, was brought back to Vancouver from Trenton, Ont., by a Canadian Forces Hercules.

A friend of Mr. Stevens, Harold McPhee, who handled the moving, said several people have called him complaining about the free transportation.

"I don't see what they have to complain about," he said.

"The space wasn't being used, and so it really didn't cost the taxpayers a cent."

Air Canada said it would have charged about $700 to bring the Tiger Moth here on its air cargo flight from Toronto.

Defence Waste Scored

OTTAWA (CP) — Money spent by Canada on anti-bomber defence is a waste of public funds, says Warren Allmand (L-Montreal, Notre-Dame-de-Grace), a member of the Commons defence committee.

Allmand says in a minority statement issued Monday that the committee majority, in its report to the Commons last week, did not "establish with conviction that we need a special anti-bomber defence."

The real anti-bomber defence, "as well as the defence against any kind of attack," is the U.S. nuclear deterrent.

IN ONE AREA

"To maintain a special anti-bomber defence in addition to the nuclear deterrent is to over-defend in one area; to waste public funds, and to dedicate too much attention to a doubtful blunder and not enough to the causes of real danger."

Instead of spending large sums on a "questionable" bomber defence, Canada should play a greater role in attacking the causes of friction between the great powers, says Allmand.

Warrens Fishing In B.C.

SEATTLE (AP) — Former United States Chief Justice Earl Warren flew through Seattle Monday on his way to a salmon fishing vacation in British Columbia and Alaska waters.

Warren and his wife flew to Seattle from their Washington, D.C., home and almost immediately took another plane to Vancouver.

Warren said he and his wife would take a charter boat from Vancouver up through the Inside Passage to Alaska, fishing along the way.

He said he intended to spend three weeks on the visit.

Can of Exploding Beer Suds Out Fire in Car

JENSEN BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A can of beer holds an honor spot in the annals of the Jensen Beach volunteer fire department. Chief Randolph Spinney tells the story this way: A cigarette lighter popped from its holder and rolled under the seat of a car driven by Norman Decker of Jensen Beach. Unnoticed, the lighter set fire to the upholstery. As the flames spread, the heat increased. The beer warmed, and the can exploded, spraying the blaze. Firemen finished the job with conventional equipment.

Saanich Planning

Freeze Lifted On Apartments

Saanich lands and planning committee Monday night took action on the building of duplexes and apartment houses in the municipality.

Here are the developments:
● Committee ruled that duplex development in that part of the municipality where subdivision now is regulated to 8,400 square feet be limited to lots of 10,000 square feet with 100 foot frontages.

● Ruled that no duplexes be built in farming zones.

● Moved to ask the municipal solicitor if there is any way of regulating repetition of dwelling designs for duplexes.

● Moved to reactivate applications for the building of apartments in the municipality.

A freeze was put on apartment building two months ago to enable the planning department to make a study of the future role and location of this type of accommodation.

An interim report was presented Monday night, which estimated that about three more weeks would be needed to produce the final study.

The committee decided to end the freeze in the meantime because the two months is up.

ROLE OF APARTMENTS

The study will consider the role of apartments in residential development, housing as a municipal responsibility, the demand for apartments, concepts and criteria. It will also include a plan, residential development policies and suggestions for implementation.

The study will propose areas for apartment development until 1971.

Holiday at B.C. Tel

Executives Toil While Men Rest

● Three telephone cables severed. Page 15

By NANCY BROWN

While B. C. Telephone Co. co-operators and linemen get chance to laze on the beaches during Dominion Day, most of the highest paid executives will be working.

"This will be the first time that supervisors have had to work over a statutory holiday," said telephone company spokesman Glyn Jones. "Normally we work a switchboard and emergency repair crew over a holiday, and one of their number is appointed to take over supervisory duties."

The switch is the result of a week-long strike of company employees who are asking for a 32.1-per-cent wage increase over two years, as well as benefit improvements and a reduced working week.

The strike which started last Monday in the Lower Mainland and spread to the rest of the province Friday, involves 6,600 members of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers.

Mr. Jones said in Victoria 96 supervisors have taken over the duties of the normal complement of 335.

"We are working 12-hour shifts," he said, "and the days are beginning to run into one another."

"We're into our fourth day here, but it must be harder for the people in Vancouver who have finished their eighth day of 12-hour shifts."

He said there had been an exceptionally heavy load of traffic for the executive staff to deal with Monday, but he is hoping things will be slacker today when business offices will be closed.

"Perhaps we'll catch up on work that's been piling up. We were able to change over to the new Centrax system for the federal government offices on schedule at 8 a.m. this morning," he said.

"This changeover, which puts the offices under one consolidated system, was quite a challenge to our supervisors."

Mr. Jones said all emergency calls, including those dealing with police, fire and hospitals, were being handled by the management staff.

From Vancouver, Bert Johns, union general secretary, plant division, said the number of people who are working is indicative of the quality of service.

"Management keeps saying they are getting along quite smoothly, but you have only to look at the figures to see what must be happening."

He said the workers had offered to look after emergency work from police, fire departments, ambulances and hospitals, but the offer had not been taken up.

"We still stand ready to get a crew in on any of these emergency services if the supervisors find a problem too tough to handle," said Mr. Johns.

Sooke Getting Young Offenders' Unit

Welfare Minister Dan Campbell announced on the weekend that a new facility to treat juvenile offenders will be built in the Sooke area.

Mr. Campbell said the property has been acquired but tenders for the building are still to be called.

He said construction will begin this year but declined to set a date.

The Sooke unit will accommodate 32 juveniles and the ratio of staff to inmates will be much higher than at Brannan Lake correctional school.

Mr. Campbell, who was speaking at Brannan Lake school near Nanaimo, said he hoped this proposed unit and a similar one planned for the mainland would fit a "ring of services" offering specialized treatment for young offenders.

"We hope to be able to find a place in this ring for young people who have difficulties," he said.

Mr. Campbell said that the policy, adopted by legislation passed in the last session, requires that juvenile court judges commit a delinquent offender to the superintendent of child welfare who will then decide the youth's fate.

They may be sent home, to foster or group home or to a institution like the Brannan Lake School.

Until recently, juvenile court judges had power to send youth directly to an institution as part of his sentence.

Dominion Celebrations

Forces Fired Up for Big Day

Members of the Canadian Armed Forces based here will provide the major part of the pageantry marking Canada's 102nd birthday today.

More than 275 members of the 1st Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, along with 38 members of the 5 (B.C.) Field Battery, RCA, will combine in a colorful feu de joie ceremony at the soccer field in Beacon Hill Park at 2 p.m.

The artillery unit will fire a 21-gun salute at noon at Work Point Barracks.

The Queen's Own, accompanied by the bugle band and pioneers, will march through the city with the 5 (B.C.) Field Battery before taking up position for the ceremony in the park. The field battery's band will entertain early arrivals at the park.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen will inspect the troops prior to the firing of the feu de joie.

Ships and other units of Maritime Command Pacific in port will fly appropriate flags and pennants to mark the occasion.

The weather office predicted mostly sunny skies for Victoria's celebration of Dominion Day.

A 10-mile walkathon around the Oak Bay border will be led by Victoria MP David Gross in a "boost the band" effort sponsored by Oak Bay Kiwanis Club to raise funds to send Oak Bay senior high school band to Expo 70 in Japan.

Sidney's celebrations will begin with a pancake breakfast at Tulista Park at the foot of Weiler Avenue. There will be a parade and boat races in the morning and an Indian Victory dance followed by the start of the Lions Club Walkathon.

An attraction outside the Greater Victoria area is Saturna Island's annual lamb barbecue, starting at 9 a.m., which is to be followed by games.

Four Hurt In Crash

Four people were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, two of them believed in serious condition after a car left Esquimalt Road near Alston and knocked down an oak tree in Victoria West Park at 1:30 a.m. today.

Despite Bylaw Defeat, Says Loffmark:

'No Need to Delay Hospital Vote'

By IAN STREET
Health Minister Ralph Loffmark says he doesn't think either the defeat of Victoria's capital spending program or the views of certain local politicians are valid reasons for delaying until 1970 the proposed money bylaw to provide new acute care hospital beds for the capital region.

"I think if the majority of the representatives of the capital region hospital district decided there is to be no money bylaw this fall, there isn't very much I can do about it," Mr. Loffmark said in an interview.

But he added: "I should in this case properly tell these officials and the people of Greater Victoria that from where I determine the problem, I see no real reason why the vote should not be held this fall. I think next year will be a little late."

The minister warned regional hospital officials that they need only look at the delays experienced in normal hospital planning to realize that "any unseemly delay here could be serious."

Mr. Loffmark stated earlier that the government felt the bylaw should be put to ratepayers in Greater Victoria before the end of the year, with only the number of beds and amount of money to be spent in total and each year established.

Actual planning and location of new hospital facilities would then be carried out on recommendations of the advisory board to the hospital district.

The minister was also asked to comment on attacks by NDP health critic Dr. Ray Parkinson, who told a press conference last Friday that the new Eric

Stuart Institute adjoining Royal

Jubilee Hospital was "a white elephant."

"The official opposition takes its duties very seriously," Mr. Loffmark replied. "They oppose everything. If we build a big project, it's too big. If we build something modest, then it's too small."

"I'm encouraged by their criticism. It shows we're on a right track."

School Board Chairman:

UVic Curbs Emphasize District College Need

By BILL STAVDAL

New restrictions on first-year enrolment at the University of Victoria emphasize the need for a district college. Greater Victoria school board chairman Dr. Carron Jameson said Monday.

Dr. Jameson was commenting on UVic's announcement that first priority this fall will be given to freshmen with a C-plus average or better, with a registration ceiling of 2,000 on the first-year class.

If the demand for enrolment increases at the same rate it did in 1968, about 300 first-year students will be denied entrance.

UVic acting president Dean Robert Wallace recently said the campus was $1,500,000 short of the money it required from the government for 1969-70.

The ruling by UVic has raised questions of what happens to students already recommended by their schools with less than a C-plus average (about 67 per cent). Student are recommended if they have a C average (about 60 per cent) in all eight subjects.

Dr. Jameson commented Monday evening:

"To my way of thinking, recommendation in an academic program means a student is capable of handling university work."

"If this is the case, it will be greatly unfair to students who have gone on this assumption."

"I wish some indication had been given earlier, but the university didn't know its grants until early this month."

"This emphasizes the need for the (school) board to get into post-secondary education very quickly."

"I hope the education department will get the message," Dr. Jameson said.

The school board has applied to the department for permission to go ahead with plans for a district college. The existing Institute of Adult Studies, now having high school status, would become the equivalent of a regional college but be operated by one school district.

Ronald Perry, UVic registrar and the key man in the current enrolment squeeze, said Monday:

"This is a painful decision for all concerned."

He said full information on the new enrolment priorities will be supplied to students as they write to his office.

All applications for first-year admission will be set aside until the C-plus students are accommodated, said an official announcement from UVic.

Resthaven Damage Light

Elderly Woman Held After Hospital Fire

By BOB PETHICK

Sidney RCMP took an elderly woman into custody Monday after a fire was set in a basement washroom of Sidney's Resthaven Hospital.

Police said the fire was started by a bottle of solvent in a rag-filled paper bag set on the ledge of a grill-covered window. The blaze set off three sprinklers, but did no other damage.

Police did not release the name of the woman held and no charges had been laid Monday night. She was taken to the Bay Pavilion of Royal Jubilee Hospital for observation.

After the fire, a woman seen coming out of the hospital was followed by one of the Resthaven doctors. He flagged down a police car on its way to the fire.

EMERGENCY ENTRANCE

"Whoever it was certainly seemed to know the way around the hospital," said hospital administrator Thomas Bradley. He said he understood that just before the fire a woman had taken a bus to the hospital and come in through the emergency entrance.

"As soon as we smelled smoke, I asked the staff to stand by and I ran down into the basement," Mr. Bradley said. "I could see the sprinkler system had taken care of the fire so there was no need to call for an evacuation."

He explained that the nearest patients were two floors away from the fire scene.

Summer Session For 1,300

More than 1,300 students begin work Thursday at the University of Victoria's summer session, seeking credits toward degrees.

The university's 13th summer session lasts seven weeks, and is described by director Dr. Hugh Farquhar as "the most stimulating set of programs we've ever offered."

A least one-third of the faculty of 106 is from other universities.

'Let Businessmen Pay for Centre'

Taxpayers who have indicated their feelings by defeating a five-year progress plan should not be asked to foot the bill for a $2,600,000 convention centre, instead, the merchants who would be the first beneficiaries of a centre should pay.

This was the decision of a special city council convention centre committee meeting Monday, which said businessmen should be asked to pick up the additional tax burden.

A recommendation will be put to council that any vote on the center should be confined to a specific area, with the people directly concerned making the decision.

"If the merchants and the people in the tourist industry won't pick up the additional tax burden why should anyone else?" asked former Ald. Hugh Ramsay.

The referendum had been scheduled on a city-wide basis for later this year, but the committee felt that because of Saturday's thumping defeat of a public works plan it was obvious such a vote had no chance of passing.

MORE TO COME

After the meeting Ald. Clyde Savage said he felt Saturday's vote indicated a trend.

"I was disappointed, but I can't say I blamed the people."

"They also know that they are going to be asked to pay for sewers and hospitals before too long — perhaps they consider those things priorities."

"People are worried about inflation, and about just paying their grocery bills," he said.

Ald. Savage said people usually understand the need for, and are prepared to pay for, public works.

FIRST TO GAIN

"The convention centre has always had its opponents, and I can't see it passing in a general vote," he said.

"After all, the businessmen are to be the first ones to gain a back from a convention centre so they should be the ones to pay for it," he said.

Two other expenditure items were tabled by the city's public works committee, Monday.

REPORT LATER

Ald. Ian Stewart, who was scheduled to present a report on plans for a major redevelopment in the 700 block Yates, said that in view of Saturday's events, he would make his report later.

It was also decided to table a proposal for repairs to Craigdarroch Castle.

City engineer James Garnett said major repairs to make the building safe for posterity would cost more than $100,000 plus heavy annual maintenance expenditures.

He said an alternative would be to spend $5,000 for immediate urgent repairs; and to earmark $3,500 annually for general maintenance.

Cool-Aid Grant Reduced To Vouchers

In what was termed an "ir-rational and illogical move," the provincial government has reduced its grant to Cool-Aid and is giving the local food self-help organization food vouchers only.

The move has stymied a Cool-Aid plan to buy a second house. The government had previously agreed to give $255 a month to assist the group to operate a house at 553 Balmoral, where transient youngsters receive food and lodging.

The inter-municipal committee had agreed to give matching grants.

Cool-Aid adviser Hugh Wade, a city businessman, said:

"We're going to ask the committee through the city finance committee to change the wording on their part of the agreement so that we can still get $255 a month from them despite the government's actions."

"Then we can go ahead with purchase of another home."

FULL ACCOUNTS

"The province is agreeing to feed some people, but won't let them live anywhere," he said. "It's an irrational and illogical move."

He said the organization has submitted complete accounts for all the money spent.

"Perhaps no one looks at our reports," he said.

Cool-Aid received a $510 cheque April 29 for its first two months of operation, and a matching grant was received from the municipalities at the end of May.

According to R. J. Burnham of the provincial welfare department the instruction to change to grocery vouchers came directly from Welfare Minister Dan Campbell.

'PLAYING BY EAR'

He said he did not know why the grant was changed, but he understood that the minister was "playing it by ear before going any further."

"We're feeding up to 16 or 18 kids a day," said Mr. Wade. "There are never less than eight kids in, and we have been counting on the grant money."

DEPOSIT LOST

"We had been planning on getting another house and had put a deposit on it when we finally heard from the welfare department about this decision."

"We've lost our deposit, and the Balmoral house is terribly overcrowded. We had taken in some extra kids because we thought we were going to get more room and we can't just turn them out on the street."

"We have to pay bills for the house—there are services to pay for, as well as house payments," said Mr. Wade.

Mr. Wade felt Cool-Aid should get some kind of an explanation for the grant change.

"We have fulfilled our part of the bargain, I think they should fulfill theirs," he said.

Family Life Committee Chairman:

Generation Gap Often Non-Existent Scare

By NANCY BROWN

Bombardment of parents with statements about a generation gap, drug use and teenage difficulties as made them imagine problems that often do not exist, says Family Life Education Committee chairman and social worker Ken Levitt.

"Often all parents need to do is to relax and let their teenagers have their independence," he said Monday. "Unfortunately constant bombardment through press radio and television about problems has made them conscious of difficulties and unsure of themselves."

One of the principal aims of the Family Life Education Committee in Victoria is to offer parents a chance to discuss problems among themselves.

"We formed a small committee about 15 months ago to see what the needs are in the city," said Mr. Levitt.

"We found that while there are plenty of facilities for young people who want to take advantage of them, there is nothing for parents."

"Youngsters can join church clubs, the YM-YWCA, Boy's Club, the Victoria Youth Council or a myriad of organizations, most of which have a counselor attached. Parents just have to muddle through."

"When they do get together and talk about the problems of being a teenager's parent, they often find that what they had imagined to be a sign of a larger problem was really just another stage that adolescents go through."

"Teenagers go through stages just as babies and children do, and parents should take the same understanding attitude and control as necessary, as they did when they were younger."

Mr. Levitt said that for those teenagers who do have problems the most general contributing factor seemed to be the inability of some parents to let them have emotional independence.

"Today's young people remain financially dependent for much longer than previous generations," he said, "but that is no reason why they should be prevented from growing up in other ways."

"It seems as though many parents refuse to acknowledge the fact that their child is growing up, and many of the children who get into difficulties with society are those who have been inhibited by unduly severe family rules," said Mr. Levitt.

Mr. Levitt said the first public discussion under the Family Life Education Committee was held early in June.

"The committee consists of social workers, psychiatrists, church ministers and citizens, and we have no specific affiliation with any other organization," he said.

"We wanted to undertake a project in which we could involve a cross-section of the community—not just those experiencing family problems, but those concerned about their families; those whose families are normal. We want to know what the concerns and questions of parents are."

There were two sessions in the committee's public debut—the first was led by psychiatrist Dr. John Wood, and was followed by workshops. The second consisted of general discussions of questions raised at the earlier sessions.

"The most surprising thing was the way that problems appeared to be solved when parents could get into discussion with one another," said Mr. Levitt.

"I think that if we could set up discussion groups on a neighborhood basis we could help many parents just by letting them get together with their peers."

ERMA BOMBECK

The Forgotten

By ERMA BOMBECK

A man in Illinois misplaced his wife. He eventually remembered he left her in a gas station 40 miles back.

I wish men wouldn't do this. It's humiliating. If they don't want you around why don't they say so?

It would have been just as easy for him to say, "Look, Iris, I'm going on to Pimples Bend. Do you want to ride along or do you want to stay here at the gas pumps and mess around?"

I know what it's like to be married to a husband whose memory is going. Mine once abandoned me in an obstetrician's office. We had it all planned. He was to drop me off for my appointment and I was to meet him in the lobby at 4:15. At 4:45 when he didn't show I decided to return to the office. (The elevator starters had organized a pool on the golf hour I would deliver and I had 5:10).

Back in the office I read through all the heartburn ads, commiserated with every case of gas in the office and thought a lot about my garter belt which was destroying me.

At 6 p.m. the receptionist locked the filing cabinet and prepared to close up. "I can't imagine where he is," I sobbed. "He said he'd be back for me."

She put her arms around me and said, "They all say that, honey. Do you have any money or any place you can stay?"

Even when I arrived home in a cab my husband felt no remorse whatsoever. "When was the last time I ever told you I'd meet you and forgot," he charged.

"Last week," I answered, "when we were going to meet to pick out a bedroom suite."

"Okay, and the time before that?" he snarled.

"A little Chinese restaurant on the east side of town . . . You even forgot me on our honeymoon."

"If I've told you once I've told you a million times I did not forget you. It's just that I didn't know you could fit in a one-seater sports car."

Man is amazing. He can remember his miniature golf score at the office picnic of 1963. He can't remember to bring home a loaf of bread.

He can remember the serial number on the dog tags of every man he bunked with during the Second World War. He can't remember his wife's dress size.

He can remember batting averages, but not his son's grade in school. He recalls the name of the man who sold him his first car, but not his mother's birthday.

"What's a woman to do," I sighed, "when a man can just misplace you at a gas station and drive off?"

"Just keep talking," snapped my husband. "I'd find you . . . eventually."

'I'm Still Vigorous'

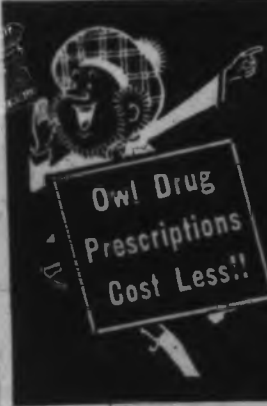

—Groom of 109

GUARATINGUETA, Brazil (AP) — Jose Furtado de Araujo, father of 23 children, married his fourth wife here Sunday. He is 109 years old and his bride 49.

"I'm still vigorous and I don't consider myself old," he replied irritably to the curious. "If I have any more children, I would consider it perfectly natural."

De Araujo has lived in this small town in Sao Paulo state for 90 years. A descendant of the Xavantes Indians, his father died at 100—as a result of snake bite—de Araujo says.

His main worry is finding a job to support his new wife, Luiza Maria da Conceicao. Everybody thinks he's too old, he complains. His wife disagrees. "This is her first married dream of marrying a bachelor," she says. His wife dies

Tricia Seeing London
As Few Others Will

LONDON (UPI)—A lady who wanted to live in the White House gave a hug Monday to one who does and together, Mrs. Hubert Humphrey and Tricia Nixon, daughter of President Nixon, said, "How wonderful to see you."

In a party room of Claridge's Hotel, the U.S. political battles of 1968 were set aside as Humphrey and his wife, Muriel, welcomed Miss Nixon to their reception for Americans attending Tuesday's investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales.

"I'm having a marvelous time here," said Miss Nixon, who was wearing a blue embroidered organza dress. "I think I'm becoming a real Anglophile."

Americans here for the investiture were not surprised by Miss Nixon's statement. She has seen London as few tourists have.

Early Monday she watched tennis from the royal box at Wimbledon, then stopped for a hat on Bond Street, then had tea at 10 Downing Street with Mrs. Harold Wilson, wife of the British Prime Minister.

"I met her when I was 11 at the dedication of the St. Lawrence Seaway. I took notes on everything that happened then and I remember it all. Last night I saw the television show about the royal family," the slim 23-year-old blonde said.

Asked if she would meet Prince Charles at the investiture she said, "I don't think so. He's going to be rather busy. But I will see Princess Anne and Prince Michael of Kent at the party Thursday."

The party is a dinner dance given by U.S. Ambassador Walter Annenberg.

At 10 Downing Street Miss Nixon and Mrs. Annenberg sipped tea and had cookies and sandwiches with Mrs. Wilson, her son Robin and daughter Joy.

"I don't think we had crumpets but I'm not sure I know what a crumpet is," Miss Nixon said.

ANN

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 13 years old and already I have a problem for Ann Landers.

It's this friend who is very nice. Gretchen has been in my class since third grade. I don't know how to put it but she makes me nervous. Whenever she sees me she either pulls up my knee socks, or twists my hands so the clasp is straight, or pushes a bobby pin in place, or she'll wipe a smudge of soot off my cheek or pick a piece of lint off me. Once she pulled a thread and my whole collar came off.

I'm not a prissy person and I don't know of anyone else who makes me feel so uncomfortable. Is there anything I can do about this pesty girl's annoying habit?—Handled With Care.

Beat Her to the Act

Dear Ann: You could say, "Please keep your hands off me," but you'd hurt the poor girl's feelings and I'm sure you don't want to do that. So, the next time Gretchen reaches for your socks, beat her to it. When her hands come toward your face ask, "Is something wrong?" I'll fix it." After a while she'll catch the message.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you don't run a garden column, but so many people read Ann Landers that I'm sure someone who sees this can help me.

When I was a child in Washington, my mother raised some delightful sweet-smelling flowers which she called "jasmine tobacco." I adored the scent and would dearly love to know by what name those flowers are called out East. I've described them to two local florists and to several friends. No one here can help me. I'll bet if you print my letter, a reader will know the answer. —Nostalgic Nancy.

Dear Nancy: I'll print the information if someone will supply it. How about it out there?

Dear Ann: Your answer to A.C., the student, was lousy. You told him to "keep plugging away." Why? Are grades

At Universities

Teaching Criterion —Ability

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Association of University Teachers said Monday it believes that competence should be the sole criterion for appointment of university faculty members.

In a position paper giving its stand on "Canadianization" and the university, the association says a professor's competence must be considered in the broad sense of his capacity to carry out the functions for which he has been engaged.

Where familiarity with things Canadian is important, such as in teaching Canadian history, government or literature, competence requires Canadian knowledge. The association notes such knowledge is not confined to Canadian citizens.

INCOMPETENT
 "From this viewpoint, the chairman of a department... who is unsympathetic or indifferent to the development of Canadian studies is clearly incompetent regardless of his academic qualifications, his citizenship, or his origin," the position paper said.

The association says it is opposed to any system of quotas or formal regulations requiring that some fixed proportion of faculty or new appointees be Canadian citizens or which would reduce or restrict the status or rights of non-Canadian faculty members.

DAMAGE POSSIBLE
 "The potential damage to individuals and to institutions of any enforceable quota regulations for outweights any possible benefits. Further, in certain areas the lack of qualified Canadians, regardless of their desirability, makes a citizenship requirement impossible to meet."

The association added, however, that it is concerned with the problem of finding jobs for graduates of Canadian universities. At present, some appointments are made on the basis of personal contacts "which in many cases may operate on international, rather than on east-west, trans-Canada lines."

OPENINGS
 The association has urged various groups such as the university presidents, graduate deans and learned societies to make known to Canadian students and faculty any openings available at Canadian universities.

Survivors Remember

Survivors of HMCS Athabaskan, sunk April 29, 1944, by German torpedo in English Channel, held brief memorial service Saturday on quarterdeck of sister ship Haida, now Toronto tourist attraction. Direct Action Assigned Youth Wing OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Youth wing must engage in "direct action and education in the community," says its new president.

W. J. Lenihan, 25, a Regina mathematics professor, was elected to head the organization at its national convention in Ottawa.

He said in an interview Monday he sees two priorities facing the group—to develop as an autonomous socialist organization for youth in schools, universities and labor movement, and to work within the parent NDP to change it from a political party to a social movement.

Mr. Lenihan, married with two children, says the 1,630-member NDY must interpret socialism in concrete terms for students and workers, showing the student how to control his school and the worker his factory.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tom Berger, provincial leader of the New Democratic Party, emerged from a two-day policy workshop attended by 38 MLAs and nominated candidates Sunday and pronounced his party "young and ready."

Mr. Berger said his party has a good blend of youth and maturity.

The NDP leader said Premier Bennett was left "sucking wind" after the Manitoba election but would not offer a prediction when a B.C. provincial election would be called.

Result in Manitoba Remains Unofficial

WINNIPEG (CP) — The result of the June 25 Manitoba general election will not be official until at least July 19, the chief electoral officer said Monday.

Charland Prud'Homme said the results became official when they are published in the Manitoba Gazette and should be ready for July 19 and July 26 issues.

Unofficial results have left the province in doubt about which party will form the government.

PRESENT COUNT
 Tabulations gave the New Democratic Party 28 seats, the Progressive Conservative government 22, Liberals five, Social Credit one and Independent one.

Ed Schreyer, 33-year-old leader of the NDP, says he expects Premier Walter Weir will hand the reins of government to the New Democrats.

Weir, 40, says he will not announce any decision before at least Wednesday.

RECOUNT DELAY
 Prud'Homme said any applications for recounts would delay announcement of official results in the constituencies concerned.

He said he has received the bulk of the hospital vote and the ballots will be sent to the constituencies where the patients normally reside for inclusion in the totals there.

Eight days must be allowed after these results are tabulated by returning officers before applications for recounts can be made.

NARROW MARGINS
 After all counting and recounting is completed the election writ is returned to Prud'Homme who publishes the results in the Gazette.

There were seven constituencies where winners were declared with fewer than a 100-vote margin.

Party standings in the 57-seat legislature prior to the election were: Conservative 31, Liberal 13, NDP 12, Social Credit one.

Albertans File For Medicare

EDMONTON (CP) — A flood of medical care registration forms hit the office of the Alberta Health Care Insurance Commission Monday on the eve of Alberta's entry into the federal medical care insurance scheme.

Under Alberta law, all residents and their dependents must be registered by today, starting date for Alberta's participation in the federal plan.

The provincial health commission then will insure basic health services of all Alberta residents and be eligible for reimbursement from Ottawa of about one-half the cost.

NO ESTIMATE
 No estimate was available Monday of the number of Albertans' 1,525,000 residents who had registered, but Chairman J. F. Falconer said the commission was not encountering "too much" opposition.

The Alberta government opposed the federal plan from the outset because it was compulsory.

Former health minister Dr. J. Donovan Ross resigned his health portfolio when the plan was introduced last spring, saying he did not wish to preside over the capitulation after opposing the plan for two years. He was succeeded as health minister by James Henderson.

Yearly premiums are $60 for single persons, $120 for residents with dependents.

Bank Manager Waiving Extradition

MONTREAL (UPI) — A Mexican bank manager Monday was preparing to return to Mexico City to answer charges in connection with the disappearance of 1,500,000 pesos (about $120,000 Canadian) from a Mexican bank.

Montreal police said Jacques Matty Duvalet, 41, had agreed to waive any extradition fight against his departure from Canada and would be accompanied by two Mexican detectives for the homeward-bound flight.

Captain Jose Salomon Tanjuz, of the Servicio Secreto Gafatur de Policia 2do Grupo Mexico de F., arrived earlier in the day to aid in Duvalet's return.

TICKET TO MADRID
 Duvalet was detained Sunday in a hotel in Montreal's waterfront district. Police said a one-way ticket to Madrid and about $200 in Canadian funds, were found in his possession.

No charges against Duvalet were lodged by Canadian police, however, and police said his return to Mexico was "voluntary."

Duvalet held the post of manager of the Banco Comercial Mexicano, in Mexico City, until he was reported missing last week.

NO RESISTANCE
 A continent-wide distribution of circulars for Duvalet's detention was ordered after discovery of the shortage of bank funds.

Montreal police said Duvalet offered no resistance when he was taken into custody.

Courtroom Parade

Pen-Knife Deed Punished

A Victoria man who directed his hostility at his wife rather than at the community at large was rewarded Monday in Central Magistrate's Court with what Magistrate William Ostler termed a "very lenient sentence."

Frank Tamok of 716 Kings was sentenced to three months for assaulting his wife with a pen knife.

The sentence was given after Tamok's lawyer noted the man's hostility on both this and a previous occasion had been directed only at his wife, that the wife had aggravated him and that Mrs. Tamok wanted her husband released.

Brian Offer of no fixed address was apprehended in the Lone Star Service Station Sunday morning and pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering with intent to steal. He was remanded until Wednesday to give the magistrate time to examine a pre-sentence report.

Richard Rancourt of no fixed address was sentenced to 10 days for vagrancy after he was found Sunday sleeping on the waterfront. He said he had come from Vancouver to spend a few days with his mother, but when he found she had moved, he met some old friends and went drinking with them instead.

A man who said he has been making some progress with his drinking problem and has been working lately was fined $25 for causing a disturbance. Thomas Hesketh of 2877 Heath was charged Saturday when he was found intoxicated and shouting and swearing in Bastion Square.

Charles Lambert of 1158 Lockey Road, was sentenced to 10 days and had his licence suspended after he pleaded guilty of driving while intoxicated.

Elaine Stensford of 3002 Balmoral was found guilty on two traffic offences. She was fined $300 and her licence was suspended for impaired driving and she was fined an additional $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Mark Spencer Dines of no fixed address, charged with selling LSD, was committed for trial in a higher court after a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Ostler.

Cure-All: Kill

Along about this time of the year, I usually find myself running a sort of medical clinic for sick plants, and this year is no exception.

Over the past two weeks I must have received 50 or more packages in the mail, all containing bits of sick plants sent in by readers who are worrying themselves sick over the condition of some pet tree, shrub or ailing house-plant.

It is flattering to be regarded as a healer of sick plants, but the truth of the matter is that I have had no training at all in plant pathology—I am just a backyard gardener, and a rather amateurish one at that. I don't have any laboratory facilities for making a diagnosis, and the only microscope I possess is a simple hand magnifying glass.

And a little of that, something to control sap-sucking insects, something else to poison leaf-eating bugs and caterpillars, a potent chemical to clean up mildew, and still another ingredient for combating or preventing a wide range of fungus infections.

To name just a few of these do-it-yourself plant doctor kits, the Niagara Brand people put out Pomogreen Rose Spray containing two bug killers and two fungicides, also SENTRY Flower Spray in aerosol form. Ortho Botano Garden Dust and Ortho Rose Dust are for both bugs and blights. Later's Home Orchard Spray is formulated to clean up most any parasitic trouble, while Chipman All-Purpose Spray is another pretty good bet when you don't know what's wrong with your ailing plant.

Because of this, it is good garden hygiene to pick off and burn all bad leaves. They won't get any better, no matter how much you dose them, and as long as they remain on the plant, they constitute a possible source of re-infection.

Remember, too, that your ailing plant may not be infected with a disease or infested with insect pests—it may be suffering from physiological ailment, which means simply that you are not growing it correctly.

Malnutrition, poor drainage, drought, too much or too little sunshine, unmoistened soil, overdose of fertilizer, weedkiller poisoning—these are all faults in environment, and cannot be corrected by spraying or dusting.

I have had enough practical experience to spot the characteristic damage done by certain bugs—thrips and mites and flea beetles, for instance—but with the many fungus and virus diseases of plants, the symptoms would have to stick out a mile before I have a clue as to what is wrong.

Fortunately, it isn't always necessary to know the name of the illness in order to treat a sick plant. Just as a medical doctor can treat an unknown low-grade infection with an antibiotic drug, so we have what you might call "backshot" remedies for plants.

These cure-alls contain a little of this

ART BUCHWALD

If Nixon Had to Drive

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon endeared himself to the American people last week when — after taking a helicopter ride over Washington and viewing morning rush hour traffic — he said on his return, "I'm glad that we don't have to drive to work."

Now there may be some embittered drivers who would compare that remark with Marie Antoinette's "Let them eat cake," but I think they're being unfair to Nixon.

What he really meant to say was that under present conditions, it would be impossible for him to be a commuter and also be president of the United States.

Suppose Nixon had to drive to the White House every day from his suburban home in Virginia.

It's seven o'clock in the morning. Pat has just made the President his breakfast.

"Who has the car pool this week?" she asks.

"Henry Kissinger," the President replies. "Ron Ziegler had it last week, and I've got it next week. It's a bore, but it's still better than taking three cars into work."

At 7:15 a horn blows. "That's Henry. Goodbye, dear. I'll be home between six and nine o'clock, depending on how the traffic is."

Henry, Ron and the President start towards Washington. On the way into town, Kissinger briefs the President.

"You have a meeting with the congressional leaders at 8:30; then at 9:30 the Soviet ambassador is coming to your office; at 11 o'clock you're to greet the President of Zambia, lunch with the joint chiefs of staff and then you have a National Security Council meeting."

"Henry, stop talking and watch where you're driving."

Enter David Frost

SHEILAH GRAHAM

LONDON (NANA) — The week that is for David Frost: Production started on his first film yesterday in England, The Rise and Rise of Michael Rimmer. And next Monday you will see him on television, talking over for departing Merv Griffin — Merv has wandered off to the CBS-TV network.

The young star of British television is functioning as executive producer on the film for Warner-Sevens Arts. But that will be done from a distance. More immediate is his five-times-a-week, 90-minute marathon in his living room. In the first week, you will see his interview with the Prince of Wales, an exclusive and a scoop. You will also see interviews with General Moshe Dayan and Israel's prime minister Mrs. Golda Meir — "The most delightful Jewish mother in the world" — and Ed Sullivan, whom David admires very much.

sofa. What I believe in more than anything else is unpredictability. You want to give the feeling that the next guy on is Moshe Dayan or Bob Hope. I love involving the audience. I love going among the audience and bring them in."

Aged 30, Frost is a most eligible bachelor. Marriage is not on his mind at the moment, anyway. "I always say to a girl, 'Fair warning, I'm not going to get married for six years.' A girl called me up the other day and said, 'You've got three years to go.' Ah well, better later than sooner."

David can be pretty probing when he is interviewing a guest. I remember one of his referee jobs between the late Randolph Churchill and Kenneth Tynan, when I thought Randolph was going to hit someone. And he sometimes gets in trouble with editorial writers here who accuse him of using his show as a court of law. But he takes the praise and the criticism in stride.

Before he flew off to New York, we had a hurried lunch at Claridge's. "Basically," said David, "what we want to do is take all the qualities of the talk shows — singers, opening monologues, etc. But, in addition we want the best of both worlds. I want to talk to a wide range of people, people in the news, subjects close to people's lives, and slot in some of the tapes interviews."

"We're going to get rid of the sofa. I believe the sofa is a very difficult prop. After talking to someone, I'll say, 'Thank you very much, goodbye.' They won't have to sit around on a

Off-camera, he is very friendly and seemingly ingenuous. "My middle name is Paradise," he confided. "The Paradise came over from France at the time of the Neogenot persecutions — 1497. I'm the last survivor."

Will he survive on U.S. television where a few years ago he was seen in That Was the Week That Was? We will have the answer soon.

AboutTV

BUREAU OF USE-LESS INFORMATION:
Saturday's stonecrows answer: The late-1930s show business news story in which all those actresses were involved was the search for someone to play
Scarlett O'Hara in Gone
With the Wind. Auditions were held for Ludlow Ball, Tarsha
Lundberg, Betty Davis,
Joan Fontaine, Paulette Godard, Susan Hayward, Katherine Hepburn, Norma Shearer, Margaret Sullivan and Vivien Leigh.

Today's question—
In recent TV, who played the ear of the series Hawk? What actor with the same last name has been a star or co-star in Pete Kelly's
Blues, Islanders, Galt
Men and FBI? Answers Thursday.

Tuesday Highlights

● C-INVESTITURE of the Prince of Wales is to begin at 4 a.m. on Channel 2 and 6, 7 a.m. on Channels 5, 7 and 12, 8 a.m. on 8, and 10 a.m. on 4. Highlights will be shown at 10 p.m. on Channels 2, 6 and 7.

● SUMMER BUNS start for Let's Talk Music, Laurel and Hardy, and A Place to Rest, all on Channel 2.
The recommendation is for L & H.

● C-730 p.m.—Saga of Western Man examines the anatomy of pop music. Significant, I call it—8.

● C-900—The CBC's main how to what it calls Canada
Day is Bonjour Canada, a mixture of Jon Vickers, Gordon Lightfoot, Les Fein Folies, Don Harmon, Vanda King and some Stranded folk—2, 8.

● C-900—First Tuesday, the monthly NBC newsmagazine, includes reports on Soviet spaceport and English schools—5.

● C-900—CTV marks Dominion Day by repeating A Very Special Breed, which is about northern Canadians
—8.

● 9:00—NET Festival reruns a special on composition, Carlos Chavez—8.

Tuesday Movies

C-12:45 noon—Queen of Babylon (1956 turkey). Turn down the sound and watch Rhonda Fleming inhale—6, 8.

2:00 p.m.—Amorous Mr. Pavn (1965 comedy). Ian Carmichael, Dennis Price, Joan Greenwood, Cecil Parker.
Might be great with that cast—13.

4:00—Drums Across the River (1954 Audie Murphy)

5:30—Raw Deal (1956 how-to-make-a-movie-without-them). Yvonne DeCarlo, Rory Calhoun—12.

9:00—Worm That Man (1943 English suspense)—13.

11:00—Rhapsody (1954). One of Liz Taylor's worst —12.

11:30—Mother Didn't Tell Me (1950 romantic comedy).
Dorothy McGuire. I'll tell you: don't watch—7.

1:30—Stranger on the Shore (1953 suspense), Paul Muni—7.

1:30—Scotland Yard Mystery (year unknown). KTVW says Sir Gerald du Maurier heads the cast. Gee—13.

Tuesday Radio

6:30 a.m.—Investiture of the Prince of Wales. In full. Highlights will be run at 10:10 p.m.—CBU (600).

9:00—Mr. Trudeau's July 1 address—CBU.

8:05 p.m.—Gala Performance has the Andre Watts recording of Brahms' second piano concerto—CFMS (58.5).

9:10—Our Emblem Dear Is, says the CBC, left-handed skate in Canada Day. Mavor Moore wrote it—CBU.

Wednesday Highlights

C-5:00 p.m.—Baseball, Chicago Cubs vs. the Expos at Montreal. On web, David dobered O'Leary—2, 6.

9:30—Sounds of Summer on Channel 9 Sundays look like a fine summer series, but the best has got to be the (David) Frost report, which returns with an opening topic of Authority—2.

The Reverend). May I pan by saying it's a 7a, 7a—2.

12:45 noon—Movie, Women and Guns (1959 disgrace),
Kim Hunter. I'm still vote for No. 1—6, 8.

2:00 p.m.—Testament of Dr. Mabuse (1960 dubbed horror). Gert Frobe—13.

4:00—You Never Can Tell (stupid 1951 fantasy-comedy). Dick Powell—7.

5:30—Return of Monte Cristo (1946 junk). Louis
Hayward. How can such a good book be perverted?—12.

C-9:00—Cinderella (1950 Jerry Lewis)—4.

9:00—Shake Hands with the Devil (1958 IRA action). Cagney, Don Murray, Michael Redgrave, Dana Wynter, Olympia Dukakis, many more—8.

11:00—Claudia and David (1946 romance, fantasy but fairish). Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young—2.

11:30—Everybody Does It (overly cute 1949 triangle thing). Linda Darnell, Paul Douglas—7.

11:40—Frankenstein's Daughter (1958 garbage)—6.

11:45—Bach and the Bobby-Soxer (1947 comedy, good then, fair now). Cary Grant, Shirley Temple, Myrna Loy, Rudy Valley. You remember bobby-soxers?
The ladies of the stone age—2.

C-1:05 a.m.—Slaves of the Invisible Monster (1950 serial). So bad it's not even camp—5.

1:30—Frontier Marshal (1938 Randolph Scott)—7.

1:30—Women Aren't Angels (English comedy, year unknown). If they think that's news, they're crazy—13.

Wednesday Radio

6:30 p.m.—This week's Arthur Rubinstein program is mostly a Mozart concerto—CBU-FM (105.7).

8:05—Gala Performance has quite a combination: The Firebird and Rhapsody in Blue—CFMS (58.5).

● Recommended: C—Color.

Dominion Takes A Holiday

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — By law today is Dominion Day. But by federal news release it's July 1.

Releases from the state secretary's department call it July 1 or "Canada's birthday."

Nowhere in the news releases issued here is there a reference to Dominion Day.

Perhaps it's a gentle preparation for another official move to change the name to Canada Day.

WITHIN YEAR:

An informed source said Monday a bill to amend the Dominion Day Act of 1879 to make it the Canada Day Act may be presented within the next year. A bill to change the name to Canada Day was passed by Commons and Senate in 1946. But a minor Senate amendment held it up and it died on the order paper.

Renewed efforts to change the name were made during the Pearson Liberal administration. Jean Chretien, now Indian Affairs Minister, Yves Forest (L.-Stanstead) and Stanley Knowles (NDP-Winnipeg North Centre) all sponsored private Canada Day bills.

DEFENBAKER PIQUED

Former prime minister Lester Pearson avoided Dominion Day. When he referred to it as Confederation Day in 1967, he was quickly challenged by John Diefenbaker, then the Conservative leader.

"Does this mean more chisel-

Tolerance

Canada's Great Asset

OTTAWA (CP) — The tolerance that Canadians show towards each other is the greatest natural resource of the country. Prime Minister Trudeau says in a Dominion Day message.

Text of the message, released by his office Monday:

"Canada in 1969 is as exciting a country as it was on the centennial of Confederation, as promising, and rewarding a country as the millions of persons who have come here to settle over the decades believed it to be, as rich and beautiful and expansive a country as the Fathers of Confederation a century ago dreamed it might become."

'MORE VALUABLE'

"We are a fortunate people, we Canadians who live in this land. And our greatest good fortune, that which is becoming increasingly evident to others even if not always to ourselves, is not measured in terms of economic or political or military strength."

"It is more valuable than the sum of all of these. It is the greatest of our natural resources. It is the tolerance towards one another which forms such a basic part of the character of Canadians."

"Tolerance and moderation are found in this country perhaps in larger measure than anywhere else; against them we can judge our stature as a country and as a people. Our institutions of government and our ju-

CAERNARVON (CP) — Three men were reported killed in two separate bomb blasts in a small nearby town early today only hours before Prince Charles was to be invested as Prince of Wales here.

In another incident, a bomb hoax stopped the Royal Train carrying Charles from London to the scene of his investiture.

Man's Body Found

In the first explosion, the mutilated body of a man in his early 20s was found behind the Bee Hotel in Abergele, 46 miles northeast of here.

In the second incident in Abergele, police said two men died in an attempt to blow up a local government office there. Public buildings have long been prime targets of extremists seeking independence for Wales.

The men were not immediately identified, but one was believed to be in his early 20s.

A police spokesman said: "The men were carrying explosives when they blew up. Their bodies were found behind the local government offices. One can assume they had gone there to blow them up."

First reports said one man had died but then a second body was found.

Meanwhile the royal train carrying Charles, the Queen and most of the Royal Family was halted for 50 minutes while police checked what appeared to be a bomb found under a railway bridge further ahead on the train route. After it was discovered to be a dummy, the train moved on to a secret location in northwest Wales. The Royal Family spent the night there under heavy armed guard.

Police said the dummy bomb at Chester, about 70 miles from here, was made of plastic sticks tied to a ticking device.

Signal wires and telephone cables were cut on a stretch of the route between Aber and Bangor but an emergency crew quickly repaired the damage.

B.C. Workers in Alaska

Six Missing In Car Dive

HYDER, Alaska (CP) — Six men are believed to have drowned in a car plunge off a dock into 600 feet of water here.

Four of the men were identified as construction workers employed on the Stewart-Watson Lake highway project in northern B.C.

They were identified as Harry S. Watson, 40, of Penticton, B.C.; Reginald C. Wist, 21, of Westlock, Alta.; J. Sanford Main, 28, of Surrey, B.C.; and Reginald J. Jeffries, 40, of Prince George. The four were employed by Peter Kiewit and Sons Construction Ltd.

The other two men were identified as Rob Roy Edzerza, 25, of Good Hope Lake, B.C., and George Joseph (Blackie) Parisen, 36, of Stewart.

RCMP in Stewart, B.C., which adjoins Hyder, Alaska, said there were no witnesses to the mishap which apparently occurred early Sunday.

Three of the men had earlier chartered an aircraft to fly them to Ketchikan. The aircraft arrived at 6 a.m. but found no passengers waiting.

"We can only presume they've gone over the rail and into the water," an RCMP spokesman said.

State of Siege In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — President Juan Carlos Onganía imposed a state of siege Monday night in Argentina, where Gov. Nelson Rockefeller is on an official visit, to combat a "subversive plan" connected with the murder of the nation's most powerful labor leader.

The state of siege, imposed nine hours before Rockefeller's departure, gives the military regime the right to suspend all civil liberties, including freedom of the press. No specific measures were mentioned, however.

Monday morning, terrorists shot to death Augusto Timoteo Vandor, head of the moderate faction of the General Labor Confederation, which has not joined in generalized labor protests against the Rockefeller visit.

Authorities said there was

Vandor

nothing to connect the slaying to Rockefeller's presence as a presidential envoy. But police arrested the leader of the labor militants and Vandor's severest critic, Raimundo Ongaro, and later took 50 of Ongaro's followers into custody.

Interior Minister Francisco Imaz announced the state of siege imposition in a nationwide radio and television address Monday night, telling citizens there was "a perfectly organized subversive plot" in the country.

"Order and national security is in danger," Imaz said. He did not connect the threat to the New York governor's visit. Argentina has gone through several weeks of strike fomented by leftist students and workers in general protest against the military regime of Onganía as well as against Rockefeller's visit.

Vandor, 42, was slain in a submachinegun attack. Police said Ongaro had been arrested "for his own personal security" and he was not charged with complicity.

Asian Plan Acceptable If Without Military Overtones

India Favorable to Russian Moves

India would endorse Russian moves to set up a new grouping of Asian nations — as long as it had no military overtones, senior Indian officials have indicated to their Japanese counterparts here.

The officials, here with their prime minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, on a six-day state visit discussed with Japanese officials recent indications by the Russians that they are planning new initiatives in Asia.

Both Indian and Japanese officials agreed that they had far too few clues yet to even guess at what Leonid Brezhnev

By MARK MURRAY
From Tokyo

had in mind when he spoke recently of the possible need for a new collective security system in Asia.

Mrs. Gandhi told her hosts that the Soviet premier, Alexei Kosygin, during his recent visit to India did not mention any new military organization.

But there were suggestions from him that Russia would support a new body designed to improve regional political and economic cooperation. And the Indian party indicated that India approved of this idea as long as the grouping was not overtly anti-Chinese in character.

Economics was the main topic on the agenda of the talks between Mrs. Gandhi and Japanese ministers and the salient Indian premier provides a model exercise in seeking aid with dignity. Japan agreed in principle to resume aid for development projects in India, although how much and what projects have still to be negotiated. Mrs. Gandhi concentrated hard on selling India as an attractive spot for Japanese investment.

Some Indian officials even talked — probably over-optimistically — of Japanese business shifting some of its labor-intensive industry to India where labor is plentiful.

The over-riding impression was that India was seeking to inject some warmth into relations with Japan which have been correct rather than close in the past.

'Righteous Conservatism' Administration's Hallmark

Nixon Team Shows Its Colors

By CARL T. BOWAN, from Washington

Every federal administration quickly takes on a special mood, quality, color.

The Kennedy administration brought youthful dash and vigor to Washington. The fair, the social grace, the articulate emphasis on hopes and dreams and promises enthralled millions of Americans. Never mind the fact that John F. Kennedy was finding it difficult to deal with Congress or to turn those dreams and promises into reality.

Activism was the watchword of the Johnson administration. No problem, large or small, was to go unmentioned by some legislative proposal as Johnson sought to outdo Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal in his efforts to build a "Great Society."

So it was that that Administration was characterized by a variety of innovations and adventures in broadening educational opportunities, expanding civil rights, protecting consumers, and so forth.

The thing that distinguished the Nixon administration for the first half year was the absence of any clear mood or commitment.

Finally, in the last several days we have gotten enough signs to begin to have some idea of what will be the mark of the Nixon administration.

I suppose we might best call it "righteous conservatism." For this administration seems clearly determined — always with noble motive — to nudge back the clock ever so gently in several areas of American life.

Attorney General John Mitchell wants the courts to enslave his theory that the executive branch has carte blanche to wiretap, without court supervision or jurisdiction, the telephone of anyone thought to "use" unlawful means to attack and subvert the existing structure of government.

This is one of the most ominous ideas ever to come out of the justice department, but the administration cloaks the dangers in a righteous concern for "national security."

As part of a laudable objective of closing tax loopholes, the Nixon administration wants to forbid tax-exempt foundations from using funds to influence the outcome of any election or to serve any partisan political interests.

This seemingly unassailable stance becomes questionable, however, when one observes that the proposal is now worded in such a way to prevent foundations from financing programs to register Negroes to vote in the South.

Since an overwhelming ma-

OR-Z-OZ

majority of Negroes vote Democratic these days, it is not especially in the interest of the Republican party or of the politicians who gave Nixon his most effective support in the South for massive Negro registration programs to continue.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has called for a law forbidding the distribution of "inflammatory propaganda" by revolutionary groups in the United States.

It is a worrisome commentary on the philosophy of this administration that the vice president wants to rush headlong into the perilous ground of creating a group of bureaucrats to decide what is "inflammatory propaganda" and what is not or even what is or is not a "revolutionary group."

Not all this administration's subtle lapses into conservatism can be gilded with a righteous rationale. The back-and-forth hubbub over the proposed appointment of Dr. John H. Knowles as HEW's assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs was clearly occasioned by a desire to please the American Medical Association.

Knowles was too liberal for the AMA; the AMA has contributed handsomely to the political campaigns of several Republicans; so what else did Nixon need in the way of a recommendation against Knowles? His fellow Republicans gave this rationale openly.

So that is how it is done now. No one makes pro-segregation statements, or says enough Negroes are voting already, or denounces the constitutional ban on unwarranted searches, or proposes censorship, or condemns Medicaid and Medicare.

But there is a constant chipping at the edges of all these areas. It is "resurgent" conservatism by shrewd encroachment.

Threat to Democracy Feared

Political Scientists Sense Danger in German Coalition

By JOE ALEX MORRIS, from Wessling

As seen from the ivory tower, the German political situation today is depressing if not altogether morbid. This was the trend of opinion expressed by German and American political scientists who met in this West German city to discuss the state of the federal republic after 20 years of existence.

It was attended by 82 professors, including Dr. Carl J. Friedrich of Harvard and Hans J. Morgenthau of Chicago, as well as Germany's Interior Minister Ernst Benda and other leading German academicians and politicians.

The meeting, first of its kind, was organized with a review of the state of affairs as the main theme. But the subject quickly narrowed down to an analysis of the "Grand Coalition," in which the two major German parties with 50 per cent of the votes in the federal parliament, have been running the country for the past 2½ years.

The consensus of the panelists and floor speakers was that the grand coalition is unhealthy and endangers future political development toward democracy. There were, of course, differing opinions and widely varying shades of meaning, but these trends stood out as both important and achieved a wide measure of agreement:

● Grand coalitions are unhealthy because they tend to drive the opposition vote to non-democratic extremes. In Germany's case, this meant the far-right National Democratic Party (NDF).

● Such a coalition leads to a diffusion

of responsibility for making decisions which only confuses and sours the voter.

● This particular coalition had failed to accomplish one of the main tasks which led to its formation — electoral reform which would lead to eliminate splinter parties of the radical right and left.

Perhaps the most depressing view was expressed by Prof. Morgenthau, who said the grand coalition was a case where a government crisis "is transforming itself into a crisis of the democratic system."

With the two major parties amalgamated, "the essence of democracy is still further diminished," he said. "It becomes difficult if not impossible to place particular responsibility on a particular person."

This results in a lack of decision on the part of the German voter, he said, and drives the opposition voter "outside the democratic framework."

Morgenthau's views were backed up by Prof. Rudolf Wildermann, of Mannheim University, one of West Germany's best-known political scientists and public opinion researchers. He stressed that since the inception of the grand coalition, opposition to the whole democratic political establishment had been increasing.

This opposition was reflected in voter indecisions, which is running about 30 per cent, perhaps 10 per cent more than normally expectable at this stage of an election year. His opinion was backed up by Dr. Hans Friderichs of the Free Democratic Party, who predicted that 34 to 40 per cent of the voters would go against the grand coalition parties.

African Religious Leaders Switch Attitudes

REUTERS, from Nairobi

Churches in Kenya are taking a new look at polygamy following a recent meeting here of the All-Africa Conference of Churches.

The conference-representing churches in Uganda, Zambia, Kenya, Ghana, Cameroon, Nigeria, Liberia, Malawi and Ethiopia decided the church probably was wrong in its initial decision to bar polygamous families from memberships and decided to take a more lenient attitude in the future.

The law barring polygamous families from church membership might have done the church more harm than good, the conference said in its communiqué on the meeting.

Polygamy is legal in Kenya and church experts feel any church law which attempts to interfere with this traditional way of life will cause social disruption without being effective. They also feel that as other parts of the world are taking a freer attitude toward morals as a whole, polygamy is hardly an issue any longer.

There are strict rules surrounding the marriage of a man to more than one wife in Kenya. Usually the first wife holds a higher position in the marriage than other wives.

Kenya has a long tradition of polygamy and most women appear to accept co-wives, who usually take the role of companion and work mate. The presence of a second, third or fourth wife is regarded as a sign of wealth in the family.

Probably it is most deeply entrenched among the Baluya tribe who live in Kenya's Western area and spill into Uganda. Among this tribe every wife attempts to produce as much food as she can so the family can use the money to buy more goods each year.

One Baluya leader, Ishmael Owiro, who lives in Kenya's South Nyanza district near Lake Victoria, has 11 wives and 65 children—eliminating any need of a labor force to work his farm.

His wives and children in fact are the only occupants of Kanjira village which has among other things its own school and chapel.

Said one expert on polygamy, "In America and Europe where polygamy is illegal, many keep changing partners through divorce. This brings such societies closer to polygamy than they would care to think."

Together with Kenya's stated policy of increasing its indigenous population, this could give polygamous marriages in the country a bright future.

Crown Like No Other

CAERNARVON, WALES (UPI) — The crown that Prince Charles wears at his investiture today as Prince of Wales is nothing like royalty has ever seen. As one critic said, "You'll either love it or hate it."

In place of previous crowns that looked as heavy as they felt, designers produced a sort of space-age crown — of graceful arcs and gold bent in modernistic, streamlined angles.

It is, at three pounds, roughly three times lighter than it would have been had it been produced by traditional methods.

It is "dramatically 20th century," said designer and maker Louis Osman. I have tried to make something that is modern.

He said there was "no lavish expenditure on ostentation."

The crown has none of the heavy jewels traditionally associated with royal headgear. It has 87 gems — 75 diamonds and 12 emeralds. The main structure is in 24-carat gold and the crosses that adorn its sides in 22-carat Welsh gold reinforced with platinum.

The crown was produced in a chemical bath from a wax model.

Not everybody likes the modern-style crown. Tailor and Cutter, the frequently-irreverent monitor of British men's fashion, described it as "somewhere between a barbed wire crown of thorns and a faint facsimile of the unknown political prisoner."

Anti-Bomb Gear In Wings For Investiture

CAERNARVON, Wales (UPI) — If anyone plants a bomb in Caernarvon castle on Prince Charles' investiture day Tuesday, Maj. Clifton Jeffries' team of bomb disposal experts have an impressive array of James Bond equipment to deal with it.

The Royal Army Ordnance Corps team is temporarily based in Caernarvon with a convoy of emergency vehicles and a helicopter standing by at a second's notice in case of a bomb alert.

Jeffries told about the equipment which his men use:

X-RAY MACHINES

"We have two means of x-raying a satchel or brief case to see what's inside. We have a portable x-ray machine which can be run off the main electricity or a portable generator. We also have a radioactive source which is quick and easy to use but doesn't give quite such a clear picture.

"We also have a device which can cut into an object by remote control and we can freeze the contents of it."

Confessions Read:

House Fired with Gasoline

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (UPI) — Signed confessions in which a brother and sister said they sprayed their house with gasoline and then ignited a fire which killed 12 members of their family were introduced Monday at a preliminary hearing.

Susan Bailey, 15, and her brother, Roger, 13, appeared before justice of the peace A. L. Rothwell. Testimony from four witnesses was heard and the hearing was continued until next week.

Miss Bailey's signed confession said she siphoned gasoline into a dishpan from her father's car. Her brother said he helped her.

SIPHONED FROM CAR

"I went to bed at about 10 o'clock, woke up shortly after midnight and went to wake Roger up," Miss Bailey's statement said. "I got a dishpan from the kitchen, got hold of a plastic hose and went to siphon gasoline from my father's white courthouse car which was parked outside. . . I first started with father's and mother's room, then in every room except the bathroom.

"After emptying the gasoline in the dishpan, I put it back under the sink where I first got it. Roger and I then went outside, lit a piece of paper with a lighter and tossed the burning paper through a broken window.

Roger's statement said: "While Susie was spraying the gasoline, I waited in the dining room. Susie said, 'hurry up so I started helping Susie. After Susie tossed the burning paper through the window and the house started burning Susie and I went to the laundry room and she called Johnny Bumgarner.

SURPRISE WITNESS

John Bumgarner, 18, a first cousin boyfriend of the Bailey girl, was a surprise witness at the hearing. Bumgarner testified that he and Susan were secretly engaged and that they planned to get married when she became 18.

Susan's father, Charles Bailey, 41, had ordered the girl to stop seeing Bumgarner because of their close blood relationship. According to a statement signed by Susan, she planned the fire because she was angry with her father over his efforts to break up her romance.

Roger and Susan admitted setting the Bailey home afire last June 8. Bailey, his wife, Ruby, 35, and 10 Bailey children ranging in age from six months to 17 years perished in the flames.

The two children have been charged with the murder of only their father because he was the head of the household.

University, Paint Shop Seattle Bomb Victims

SEATTLE (AP) — Police said Monday they had no leads in an investigation of four weekend bombings here, the worst of which blew a six-foot-wide hole in the reinforced concrete floor of the University of Washington administration building.

No one was injured, but Paul Steiner, who was in the basement when the bomb exploded at the university, said he first thought an earthquake had jolted the structure.

The blast blew out walls and ceilings, shattered windows 600 feet away in other buildings and knocked off a security policeman's hat.

Two cars were damaged by fire bombs early Sunday morning, and Sunday night the front of a paint store was wrecked by a bomb made of explosives placed in a piece of automobile exhaust pipe.

A university spokesman estimated damage would exceed $100,000.

Recreation Centre Planned for Tahsis

Hiroshima Day For Study

CAMPBELL RIVER — The newly-formed Voice of Women in Campbell River is planning to attend a meeting in Nanaimo July 22 to discuss with other Island groups plans for an all-Island Hiroshima Day program for August.

The local group recently picketed the Van Isle Theatre, Campbell River, to protest the showing of The Green Berets, a film about the war in Vietnam featuring John Wayne.

Pro-tem officers have been elected as follows: president, Mrs. Terry Padgham; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. C. Johnson; recording secretary, Mrs. B. Akelaitus; telephone convenor, Mrs. R. Cahwell.

TAHSIS — Businessman Tony Grande has announced plans for a hooders recreation centre at Tahsis.

The centre is to consist of a 200-seat theatre with upholstered seats, a cafeteria and a large room with pool tables, and a dancing area.

Mr. Grande said a "bang-up opening" was planned in October. The centre would be located between the present laundry and sports field.

"So far as our movies are concerned, we are negotiating to bring some of the big film spectacles to Tahsis—something we haven't been able to do in the past because of the small theatre screen and poor sound facilities.

Other projects are also ahead for Tahsis. Tahsis Co. is building a combination baseball park and soccer field near a new cedar sawmill being constructed by Nootka Cedar Products Ltd.

Sites for mobile homes and other developments are being prepared and highways department officials are starting a study to see if a road can link Tahsis with the Island road system.

Skydiver in Hospital
After Record Attack

DUNCAN — Skydiver Roger Foley of Victoria was in Cowichan and District Hospital Monday recovering from a broken ankle.

The accident dashed Mr. Foley's hopes Sunday of beating a world skydiving record which was set recently at Abbotsford with 150 jumps in one day.

The accident happened as Mr. Foley was making his 101st landing at Duncan airport. He had been making trial jumps at every opportunity since he announced some months ago that he would attempt his feat of record-breaking feat.

Members of his club said they appreciated all he was doing to promote skydiving. They said that the attempt to break the record had cost him considerable time and money.

To date, Mr. Foley has more than 800 jumps to his credit. He made his first jump

Sunday at 4:10 a.m. and was completing jumps at a rate of four to five minutes each.

At the same time members from parachute clubs up and down the island — many of them former students of Mr. Foley — were packing the 20 parachutes which Mr. Foley was using.

Three members of the club met Mr. Foley as he landed, helped him out of his harness and then he walked over to where Ed Marshall, 22, of Victoria, was waiting to help him on with a new parachute.

The plane from which he had jumped approximately 2,000 feet a few minutes before was waiting and ready for takeoff once Mr. Foley had taken his position by the door.

HORNS SOUND

Dick Hahn of Campbell River helped to mark Mr. Foley's 100th leap by jumping with him and at the completion of the jumps approximately 100 spectators sounded their car horns.

Following the dual jump Mr. Foley took a tea break. At that time he said he was feeling in good condition and felt he would meet his target.

He planned to continue straight through until he was finished. While completing the 107 jump his ankle twisted under and he cried out in pain.

WIFE HELPS

His wife and fellow jumpers ran to his aid. They attempted to make him more comfortable while waiting for an ambulance to move him to the Cowichan hospital.

"I heard it snap when I hit the ground," said Mr. Foley.

He will remain in the hospital for the rest of this week recuperating from several fractures of his right ankle. A pin was inserted to help heal the bone.

Mr. Foley was nine minutes ahead of his planned schedule at the time of his last jump.

IT'S TOO BAD

Mr. Hahn said: "It is too bad. He would have broken the record I am sure. He did a good job anyway. The accident could have happened to anyone whether on their first jump or on their 1,000th. It's really no more dangerous than skiing or motorcycling."

FRIENDLY HELPS to make Mr. Foley comfortable while he waits for ambulance to arrive after Sunday's accident during record-breaking attempt.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Shawigan Lake RCMP say people who break regulations governing small vessels will be prosecuted.

"A marine constable has been policing Shawigan Lake for the past two weekends and will continue to do so for the duration of the summer," said a RCMP spokesman.

"He has reported at least 15 violations within the past two weeks."

The violations are lack of life-saving equipment, licensing of boats and others. Prosecution will follow if further violations are noted.

Cowichan Indian Project

Progress 'Exploding'
For First Co-operative

By PETER KIENAN
(Canadian Press)

DUNCAN — Indians of the Cowichan Lake band are doing something about their "hard-core unemployed" to the tune of $30,000 gross revenue last year and an anticipated revenue of $100,000 next year.

"This thing is exploding," is the way Hamish Mutter, an adviser to the band, described British Columbia's first Indian farm co-op association located near Duncan.

"The community is happy, the farmers are happy, the Indians are happy and the department (of Indian Affairs) couldn't be more pleased," said the 60-year-old adviser, who has managed co-operatives in the province for many years.

The co-op, entirely the band's idea, began last year with the department's financial backing and loans from two local banks.

BANKS PAID

Now, the banks are paid off, the association has a long-term contract to supply berries to a Victoria winery and area farmers can buy their hay locally instead of importing it from Washington state.

In all, the association has leased 250 acres, the property of the 12 band members working full time in the co-op. The land is on the reserve.

'AWFUL MESS'

Mr. Mutter described the land as "worked over and left in an awful mess by white men." But he said the soil is rapidly being built up again.

"Our ultimate goal is to bring 500 acres, and maybe more, under cultivation and employ as many members of the band as possible."

Until the 1,500-member band's young leadership—Chief Dennis Alphonse—is 35—came up with the co-op idea, its members subsisted largely on welfare and seasonal laboring jobs.

SOME PERILS

"To men, the idea that they can live up with the idea themselves means more than anything," said Mr. Mutter.

The success story is not without its continuing perils, as Chief Alphonse pointed out. There is, for example, the peril of flooding of the unstable Cowichan River.

The chief said the government will be pressed to carry out flood control work.

UNDER WATER

Floods which were in production last year are under water this year due to log jams.

But regardless of temporary setbacks, "our group will continue to be self supporting," said the chief.

"We are exploring the possibility of market gardening, which would give us greater scope. But we will always have certain hay and forage crops to satisfy the local farmers."

WORK PLAN

The association is also exploring the possibility of a handicraft co-operative.

"The whole idea was to put band members to work, and it couldn't be succeeding better," said Mr. Mutter.

Lake Cowichan Queen

Career to Be Model One

LAKE COWICHAN — Lake Cowichan's Lady of the Lake, 17-year-old Julia Vanyo, plans a busy career.

Discussing her recent success in winning the queen competition, Miss Vanyo said: "When they announced my name as Lady of the Lake, I just sat down and cried."

"I didn't think I would win and I was busy sharing for the reaction from the girl whom I thought would win. I think I cried mostly from the relief of all of the tension."

AUGUST START

The pretty five-foot seven-inch blue-eyed brunette has always wanted to be a model and will start her training in August under the direction of Helen Beirnes of Victoria, who is well known in the field.

Miss Vanyo has modelled for three years in Lake Cowichan Anglican church annual fashion shows, presented by local merchants.

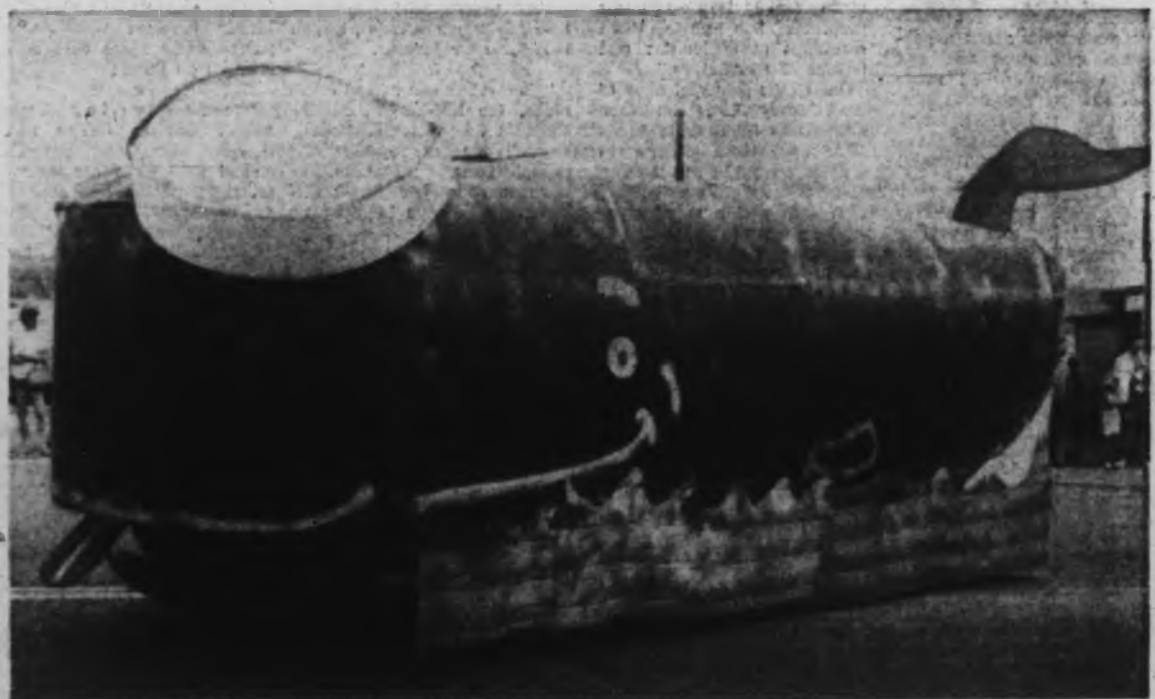

"Modelling is something exciting and adventurous as far as I am concerned," she said.

'GODD FEELING'

"I love the excitement of rushing around checking my hair, makeup and putting on clothing. I feel good showing people clothes."

As she enters into her last year of high school as an above average student in the fall, Miss Vanyo plans to continue with her private weekend modelling lessons.

"I am really looking forward to my instructions," she said.

Mosquito Attack

Air-Spraying
Coming Soon

NORTH COWICHAN — Landowners in the Crofton-Westholme district, near the waterfront, are to be told by the municipality that mosquito spraying will get underway shortly.

Mayor Donald Morton said Monday that clearance from the fisheries department is expected soon and ground-spraying equipment has been ordered.

He said the worst breeding area, between the pulp mill and the Bonsall farm, would be sprayed from the air.

According to Ralph Palmer, manager of the Fraser Valley Mosquito Control Board, the insect in the Crofton area has been identified as the Salt Marsh species.

The municipal engineer has been advised to repair dikes along the waterfront. Wayne MacDonald, chemical engineer at Crofton pulp mill, whose father owns some livestock in the area, said: "We want to get rid of the mosquitoes."

He stressed that as long as the insecticide was applied properly he had no objection to spraying, but unless dikes were repaired the spraying would be of little use.

Dairy farmer Henry Bonsall said: "My main objection to spraying is that I am not in favor of insecticides. When you have dairy cattle, you cannot spray."

He pointed out that the municipal engineer had advised against spraying and had advocated draining swampy areas.

At Chemainus Day

CHEMAINUS — Last year's Dominion Day queen Linda Syme will perform two official functions at today's Dominion Day celebration, organized by Chemainus Teen Town.

At 2 p.m. Miss Syme will plant a blue spruce at Fullers Lake arena, Chemainus, and 30 minutes later, she will crown the new queen who will be chosen from nine contestants in the arena.

Ponies Leave Young, Old Battered

By NANCY BROWN

Runway pony teams and ejected riders—careening chariots and lopping wagons—here's dirt in your eye, the pony races had arrived for the first time on lower Vancouver Island.

A gouged track and broken fences were the souvenirs left behind Saturday afternoon after a crew of Fraser Valley wagoners and charioters put on an exhibition at Saanichton Fairgrounds to thrill more than 700 Greater Victoria horse lovers.

"Excitement is a hobby," explained Cal McKinnon of Langley, a sawmill worker, as he limped around inspecting his four bay ponies after being flung out of his chariot when another rider cut in front of him.

"The riders and the ponies enjoy the workout, and the crowd loves to watch the spills."

"The excitement just turns me on, I guess, and I spend all the time I can racing either in chuckwagons or chariots."

Last year he won top awards for both the Fraser Valley and the Northwest region for ponies 46 inches and under.

How did he feel as he flew out of his chariot?

"Not nearly as bad as I felt last year when I got thrown out just yards from the finish line when I was racing a high-stakes race."

"I've got a photograph which shows the judge with his stop watch and me on the ground—and all the racing for nothing."

Love of the pulley—most of them from predominantly Welsh pony stock—runs in the families who compete in the races.

The wagon races are interspersed with flat races for the children.

Eight-year-old Kelly Davison of Aldergrove was entering her first race.

"I'm scared," she said. "I keep remembering that my sister Bonnie sprained her leg when she was thrown off a horse."

Scared or not, the spunky youngster rode her pony to a second place around the circuit, as another young rider, unable to control his mount, crashed into a fence on the turn.

Her father Cliff is one of the organizers of pony racing in Canada.

"I love ponies and I wanted to see them do something useful—something they are bred for," he said.

"They're no more dangerous than bucking broncos," he commented as he adjusted his hard hat for a ride.

"There's an element of danger in anything—crossing the street, fishing, or hunting. We try to keep the safety factor as high as possible."

Saturday's exhibition meet was marked by more spills and accidents than other meets, he said.

"The track is shorter than we like, and there's a tight turn on the one end after a downhill run, so we had to hold the horses in. It would be dangerous if we were riding for money."

"Anyway, we like a quarter-mile track so we can let the ponies go all out—that's what people pay their money to see and that's what we owe them," he said.

Mr. Davison would like to see the pony races spread right across Canada.

Abandoned Swallows Acquire New Family

Four newly-hatched abandoned swallows have found a new home and parents with Mr. and Mrs. Norman McClellan, 663 Richmond.

The McClellans have had a natural bird-house for about four years. Mrs. McClellan said Saturday the swallows hatched about a week ago. The nest is just outside the kitchen window. First the father swallow disappeared, then the mother, leaving behind four hungry babies.

When neither bird parent returned, Mrs. McClellan called Dr. Clifford Carl at the provincial museum. "He told us to bring them inside," she said.

"They were so tiny and helpless, we just couldn't leave them outside to die. In some cases it's necessary to upset the balance of nature."

The four adopted swallows are living in a shoebox.

D. A. MUR, Supervisor of Tendering.

"We'd like to come to Victoria on a regular basis," he said.

Mr. Davison valued the ponies at about $200 each.

"Those are the ones that are for sale," he said. "Most of these you just couldn't buy for any price."

A trucker of livestock, he runs about 40 head of ponies on his Fraser Valley ranch.

"For a big meet in the States we would take down about 20 chariots and as many chuckwagons," he said. "We would like to get the interest, track and stakes to attract that kind of competition in Victoria."

C-Plus Required

University Sets Stiff Entrance For Freshmen

By BILL STAVDAL

A high school graduation average of about 67 per cent is a new hurdle being raised for freshmen at the University of Victoria this fall.

In effect, the university has now abandoned its traditional policy of accepting anyone who graduates from high school on the university entrance program.

The new policy by the UVic board of governors will be formally announced Monday.

TOP PRIORITY

A university spokesman confirmed Saturday that first priority will be given to freshmen who have graduated from high school with a C-plus average—equivalent to about 67 per cent. Others will be accepted if there is room.

Acting president Robert Wallace announced earlier this month that first-year enrolment would be limited to 2,000 students.

The campus has been caught in a squeeze between the growing demand for university education and shortage of space. It is virtually certain some would-be freshmen will be turned away this fall.

ADMITTED ALL

For years UVic admitted all first-year applicants on the basis of high school graduation with a minimum mark of 50 per cent. Simon Fraser University and the University of British Columbia demanded a 60 per cent average, and UBC recently raised the average to 65 per cent.

Last fall a total of 4,885 students enrolled, an increase of almost 20 per cent in one year.

The first-year enrolment of 1913 was a 22 per cent increase over first-year enrolment the year previous.

Another 22 per cent first-year increase would have raised the freshman class to 2,334 this September. But now that's out.

The UVic spokesman said Saturday:

"We hope we will be able to admit virtually everybody who wants to enrol."

He added: "The odds of gaining entry will be greatly diminished for the student who hasn't a C-plus average."

RE-ENTRY He pointed out that all students who attended UVic last year will be guaranteed re-admittance, except those who failed their first year.

A former ruling giving preference to Greater Victoria and Island students has been withdrawn but B.C. students will have preference over outsiders.

The restrictions confirm a prediction by former UVic president Dr. Malcolm Taylor in January, 1968. He said then that UVic might have to restrict enrolment in the fall of 1969, and speculated it would be done by raising entrance requirements.

Girl Home Ready For Staff

Directors of the Victoria Hostel for Girls began advertising this weekend for supervisory staff for the project.

"We're hoping maybe a nurse or teacher, or perhaps a widow who has been a nurse or teacher, might come forward," said Mrs. John Di Castri, one of the directors.

"She'll have to be very mature, but a strong disciplinarian would not be suitable. This woman will have to be flexible but firm."

"I suppose the main requirement would be that it's someone who likes kids. She'll need a good sense of humor, too," she said.

Mrs. Di Castri said the staff would probably be between the ages of 35 and 50, but there were no age restrictions.

The minimum salary would be around $300 a month plus room and board, but this would be raised if a well qualified person was found.

Two supervisors will be required, but the work would not be suitable for a married couple.

The directors are advertising only locally at present, and will try elsewhere only if no one can be found in this area.

Firecracker Kills Man

BERGAMO, Italy (AP)—A 49-year-old man was killed by a firecracker he lit during a celebration for a newly-ordained priest. Police said the victim threw three firecrackers in the air, and one exploded next to his temple.

Driver Hunted

VANCOUVER (CP)—City police are looking for a motorist who fled an accident, leaving an 84-year-old pedestrian injured on the roadway. The victim, George Starr of Vancouver, is in satisfactory condition in hospital with a fractured pelvis.
